TO WORK NOW FOR HER BABY

Mrs. Florence Saunders, the young wife of Robert A. Saunders, who committed a highway robbery at West Thornton, N. H., because he was out of work and penniless and his wife was in a Boston hospital where she gave birth to a child, told the simple, pathetic story of her life romance to-day to the AMERICAN.

It is a story that will find an echo of sympathy in the hearts of thousands of girls who have come from Ireland to America with their hopes high for happiness and success, as did Mrs. Saunders four years ago, when she was a pretty girl of eighteen.

While working as a stitcher in a shoe factory she met Robert A. Saunders, of a good family and a graduate of Bates College, and in him she met her fate. She loved him then, when she believed that he was all that a young man should be, and he loves him now, when he is a fugitive from justice somewhere in Canada.

Mrs. Saunders says that she will devote the rest of her life to bringing up her infant daughter. The child, a very pretty little baby with long silken black hair, is an unusually interesting baby, and has been named Estelle Althea Saunders, after a dead sister of Mrs. Saunders' husband.

Saunders himself has not been arrested. According to a letter to the Sunday AMERICAN he is in Canada. But E. C. Frye, manager of the West Thornton Lumber Company, whose paymaster Saunders attempted to rob, has received a letter from the man. In this letter Saunders declared he would serve any one outsider attempted to rob, and he did not mention at the time of the attempted robbery. He pays a tribute to Miss A. S. Heard, the bookkeeper of the concern.

Mrs. Saunders story follows:

By Mrs. ROBERT A. SAUNDERS.

I am now staying with some very kind people in Boston where I am trying to forget the terrible trouble that has come over me and my little laughing baby within the past two days.

It is hard for me to believe that my husband is a fugitive from justice and that he took part in the awful affair at West Thornton. I have not heard a word from him since last Tuesday, but everything that he said in his communication to the AMERICAN, so far as I know anything about it, is true.

I have not formed any plans as yet as to what I and baby shall do. But I am young and full of hope. Before I was married I earned my own living, and I suppose that I shall have to do it again.

But oh! this is a terrible thing to me. I am still so dazed from the shock that I have not been able to think of any plans for the future. I would give five cents a breath and water or go out and work to help support my husband and myself than to have had him commit the crime he did, thinking that he was doing it to help me and our baby.

There is nothing very particular of interest in my life story. And so far as my love story is concerned, it has been a short one, fraught with trials, and now reaches the climax of trouble and suffering.

I was born in the City of Cork, Ireland and am twenty-two years old. Before I came to this country four years ago I had not done any work for pay outside of my own family. I had a sister who had come to America and who was employed in a family in Weymouth. My sister was able to earn good wages and had a good home.

You may know that in Ireland for many years the one great golden hope held out to young men and young women is that some day they might be able to go to America, where we were led to believe life was always happy and money plentiful. So my sister wrote to me telling me these things and I decided to come to Boston.

I was only eighteen years old and full of life and hope. I had received a very good education at home, and felt very confident that I would be able to make my way in the new world. And so my sister had done.

I had no sweetheart in this country whom I came to see, but you know how it is with young girls—they begin to dream of such things when they are but as old as I was when I landed in Boston.

Proposal of Marriage.

My sister met me and took me to Weymouth, where she had already obtained for me a position in a factory. I liked the place I had very well, but I soon saw that in the shoe factories girls were more independent than I was, and I got a position in a shoe factory. After a time I did stitching on a machine. I did quite very proficient in that particular work and I was making good money in a short time. The factory where I was employed is in East Weymouth.

It was while I worked there that I met Robert A. Saunders. He seemed very much impressed with me from the start. He is a good looking young man and told me that he came from Scotland. He Left Concord, N. H....8:19 a. m.

Left Tilton.....9:33 a. m.
Arrived Pittsfield, N. H.....10:30 a. m.

Actual flying time, 1h. 30m.

In his interstate flight from Waltham yesterday, including to-day's trips, Atwood flew a total distance estimated at 150 miles. His circuitous run before the gale after leaving Tilton to-day makes it impossible to give the distance accurately.

$50,000,000 STOCK ISSUE

The directors of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company met today in Boston and authorized the issue of new stock of $50,000,000. It is one of the largest stock issues ever made in Boston. The new stock will be exchanged for old stock at the rate of one share of new for five of old.

The directors also declared the regular quarterly dividend of two dollars a share, or at the rate of 8 per cent. The meeting of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company was held to-day at which a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. was declared, which is an increase of one quarter of one per cent., and now places the New England stock at a 7 per cent. per annum basis.

The issue of new stock is a part of the plan of Theodore M. Vail to place the American Telephone on a new foundation, as the result of its purchase of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and its consequent increased prosperity. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company is the parent Bell Telephone Company of the United States.

Treasurer William H. Driver of the company, explaining the stock issue, said:

"The object of the $50,000,000 new stock to-day authorized by the directors of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is to provide for the general development of the fast increase in business of the company. The proceeds of the issue will be credited to the general fund to be used as required."

When the news of the increased capitalization reached the Stock Exchange the bears, who have been looking for anything that might be construed as a bad omen, made a drive at the stock and succeeded in breaking it three points, from 151¾ to 148¾. However, the stock was well picked up by those who know its intrinsic value and position. The company is absorbing many of the independent companies, which until recently maintained a strong stand in some of the Middle Western States.

FR. GALLAGHER OF ROXBURY AGAIN ILL

Rev. Joseph H. Gallagher, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Dudley street, Roxbury, who underwent a surgical operation at St. Elizabeth's Hospital recently and who recovered sufficiently to be out of bed, is again very ill at the parochial residence on Magazine street. He was to have given the diplomas to the graduates of St. Patrick's High and grammar schools, but Rev. James F. Regan acted in his stead and announced Father Gallagher's illness.

ATWOOD LANDS IN BIG GALE

Harry Atwood brought his Wright-Burgess biplane, with one passenger aboard, to earth on Dr. E. M. Sargent's farm in Pittsfield, N. H., at 10:30 a. m. to-day, after fifty-seven minutes of as hair-raising and dangerous aviation as any birdman wants.

"The roughest hour I ever had in the air," was Atwood's description of his trip after he arrived back in Concord by automobile.

Five times Atwood tried to make a landing, but was wrenched out of his descent by the wind. One time he started from an altitude of 2,000 feet to come down. The wind caught his machine and sent the biplane and two men aboard it skimming up to the 3,000-foot level.

Atwood was trying to get to Laconia from Tilton. He did touch the outskirts of Laconia, but he couldn't achieve a landing there. Finally he was borne by the wind over Sanbornton and thence to Pittsfield, where he came down unharmed.

He left his machine in Pittsfield. He will return there to-morrow to make a flight from Pittsfield to Boston.

Atwood Describes Trip.

Atwood started to-day to fly from Concord to Tilton, thence to Laconia and back, accomplishing it all in time to get the noon train back to Boston for the Meet aviation meet in Waltham this afternoon. He carried out this program, but with variations which were introduced by the wind.

He flew from Concord to Tilton all right, carrying one newspaperman. Then he changed passengers, taking on another newspaperman for the last leg of the trip to Laconia. Here is what happened, in Atwood's own language.

"The trip from Concord to Laconia was a difficult one. The air currents were dangerous. But I landed on Tilton's aviation field all right. Right here I want to compliment the people of Tilton for the way they greeted me. A big crowd was all over my machine. There were over 2,000 people at Tilton fair grounds, but not one in the crowd was allowed to get any nearer than 500 feet to my machine after I landed. I appreciate that. I can tell you.

"At 9.33 I ascended from Tilton with C. D. Draper as passenger to make the flight to Laconia. The next hour was the roughest I ever had in the air. I touched the outskirts of Laconia, but did not land. Bearing to the eastward, I passed along the shore of Lake Winnipesaukee toward Alton Bay. The wind then forced me to take a westerly direction back over ten miles of territory and finally over Sanbornton and then back eastward over Pittsfield.

"Five times on the trip I tried to make a landing, despairing of getting back to Concord. I failed every time until I got to Pittsfield. There, when I tipped my machine and began to descend, the air currents caught me and kept me there. I left Tilton.

"On one occasion I was at a height of 2,000 feet and tried to descend. I was forced up to above 3,000 feet.

"Finally I succeeded in landing in a field on the farm of Dr. E. M. Sargent in Pittsfield at 10:30, after being in the air fifty-seven minutes from the time I left Tilton.

"My machine stood the test well, coming out absolutely uninjured from all this buffeting from the wind.

"I left the machine on Dr. Sargent's farm and came to Concord by automobile to Concord. I had to make time because I was due back in Waltham this afternoon."

Starts to Capital.

Atwood started for Boston and Waltham on the 12:01 train.

One thousand people cheered Harry Atwood as he rose from the State campground at Concord, N. H., to-day, in his Wright-Burgess biplane, to continue his interstate flight to Tilton and Laconia.

Atwood carried A. L. Fowler, a Boston newspaper man, as passenger. They left the ground at 8:09. Atwood sent the aeroplane skimming around in circles at a fifty-foot elevation for five minutes, while the spectators cheered.

At 8:14 Atwood carried his machine up to a 100-foot elevation and headed out toward the Merrimac River till the aeroplane hung over midstream.

Then the flight to Tilton was begun, following the river all the way. In five minutes the machine was out of sight of the Concord spectators.

Atwood did not take the air-line route to Tilton, but following the Merrimac made a detour around Penacook and thence to Tilton along the Winnepesaukee River. This elevation had deterred the aeronaut from attempting to fly to Tilton by the air line route.

Though he left Concord in a perfect atmosphere he encountered nasty gusts on his flight up-stream. These wind gusts kept him busy with his levers. Having a passenger aboard made the run all the more cumbersome.

NEW REVOLUTION BEGUN IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, June 20.—General Emiliano Zapata, revolutionary leader and ex-bandit, has sacked Cuernavacas, fortified the town and with 3,000 men has set up a revolution against Francisco Madero, according to reports made to the government today. This is Zapata's second attack in Madero's order to appear here for court-martial on the charge of brigandage. Other revolutionary leaders are marching to join Zapata. Seven thousand soldiers of the "Army of Liberation of the South" started to-day for Cuernavaca.

MRS. BRINE, SAID TO HAVE WEDDED AT PISTOL POINT

MISS NETTIE DOLAN.

WED AT PISTOL POINT, HE SAYS

Claiming that he was forced to play the part of bridegroom in a hurry-up marriage at the point of a revolver used by Thomas F. Dolan, of No. 16 Beaufort street, Jamaica Plain, Frank H. Brine, twenty-one years old, a salesman, who lives at No. 221 Dummer street, Brookline, has filed a petition in the Superior Court asking that his marriage to Nettie M. Dolan, daughter of Thomas F. Dolan, be annulled.

On the other hand Daniel E. Irwin, of No. 6 Bigelow street, attorney for Mrs. Brine, brands the revolver story as a pure myth and says that it was the young man's father and not the girl's who insisted that the wedding take place.

Brine, who is now in the West, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Brine of Brookline. The father is the head of the Columbia Auto Car Company of Commonwealth avenue. The family is well known in Brookline. The bride is prominent in Jamaica Plain. The statements Brine makes in his petition to the Superior Court have aroused widespread surprise and comment.

Charges Threat to Shoot.

According to Brine, he first learned of Dolan's intentions when the girl told him early in December her father would make him marry her. He says that on December 19 Dolan called on him and showed him a revolver and declared that if the young man did not wed his daughter he would shoot him.

Brine charges next that he was forced to get into a carriage with the girl and that Dolan caused them to be driven to the Brookline Town Hall, where a license on Brine's part was secured. Then the party came to Boston and were married another license.

Brine says they were then driven to the home of Rev. George A. Lyons at No. 33 Brookline avenue, where the knot was tied.

Dolan is alleged to have commanded Brine to conduct himself during the ceremony in such a way as not to awaken any suspicion and to have declared that failure on Brine's part would force him to use the revolver.

Brine alleges that his father-in-law stood behind him during the ceremony and later Brine newly-wed to the home of Brine's father. Dolan is said to have left the house with a warning to Brine that if he did not treat his wife properly he would make good on his threat to shoot.

Brine claims he lived with his wife but four days, and that on the morning of December 21 he left the home and has not seen or lived with her since that time.

Lawyers Give Versions.

Lawyer Daniel E. Irwin made this statement about the case:

"As I understand it, Miss Dolan (Mrs. Brine) had known Brine since September. After they got to know each other better they decided they would like to marry him. When the time came for them to get married, it was his father, not Brine's, who insisted that the ceremony be performed immediately. Mr. Dolan was in favor of proceeding according to the due form of the Catholic church, which would have necessitated a delay of three weeks, but it was Brine's father that insisted that the ceremony be performed at once.

"It took place on December 19. The whole story is a pure myth. Two days after the ceremony Brine wrote a letter to his father-in-law, couched in most affectionate terms, in which he said he would not change. 'We're just as happy as can be,' which is saying a good deal.

"The next day Brine disappeared and his wife has not seen or heard from him since. After the marriage they went to Brine's home to live, and after he left her she stayed there for over a month, which goes to show that there was the best of feeling between the two families. Brine has been out of the State since that time, I believe, but will have to come back now to push his case."

Attorney Michael J. Sullivan of No. 82 School street, declared that all the facts set forth in the petition were absolutely true.

21 ARE SCALDED IN WRECK

RANDOLPH, Vt., June 20.—Twenty-one persons were badly scalded when the Boston-Montreal express train No. 5 on the Central Vermont railroad crashed into a freight train. Mrs. Mary Magee of Lowell, Mass., was so badly scalded that it is feared she will die. All of the burned and injured persons were taken to the Randolph Sanitarium here, where they are being cared for.

The wreck was due to the failure of the freight train to pull far enough into a siding to permit the express train to pass through. The collision was headon. The engine of the freight train was demolished and the fiends of escaping steam scalded the people who were riding in the cars which lay flat against the wrecked engine.

The list of injured is as follows:

Mrs. Mary Magee of Lowell, Mass., badly burned; may die.

H. B. Veasey, mail clerk, scalded about face and hands.

Fred J. Hebert and Mrs. Hebert, Pawtucket, R. I., scalded.

Frank Girdlestone, and daughter, Mildred, Boston, Mass., scalded.

Felix Sambo, Worcester, Mass., scalded about body.

Oscar T. Smith, Worcester, scalded and shaken up.

Alf Laporte, Southbridge, Mass., scalded and bruised.

Mrs. E. C. Dubree, Southbridge, scalded.

Miss Dora La Lanjire, Southbridge, Mass., scalded.

Frank Mitchell, Southbridge, Mass., burned.

Joseph Goodrenit, Montreal, scalded.

Marshall Gauthier, Lowell, Mass., scalded.

Joseph Paquin, Lowell, Mass., scalded.

George Paquin, Lowell, Mass., scalded.

A. Bean, Montpelier, Vt., scalded.

Eddie Morrow, Housatanic, R. I., scalded.

Willie Delair, Montreal, burns.

Antonio Delair, Montreal, burns.

Antonio Delair, Montreal, burns.

The collision occurred early to-day at the lower end of the Randolph train yard. The express was 415 years in a siding waiting for the passenger express, which was the minutes late, was coming along at high speed to make up the time, to pass by.

RECORD CLASS AT WELLESLEY

The largest class in the history of the college today received degrees at Wellesley College. Two hundred and seventy-nine young women received the Bachelor of Arts degree. Fifteen received Master of Art and twenty-six more certificates in hygiene and physical education, a total of 319 degrees.

Twenty-two seniors graduating in the academic courses were Durant honor scholars, and twenty-two were Wellesley honor scholars. The Alice Freeman Palmer fellowship, the highest within the gift of any women's college in America, was awarded to Miss Violet Barbour, a graduate of Wellesley. The fellowship will enable her to spend the next year in the study of modern European history.

The graduation exercises were held in the chapel. John P. Mears of Boston delivered the address to the seniors.

DROP GREEK FOR YALE ENTRANCE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 20.—To-day was alumni day at Yale, and the events opened in Alumni Hall with addresses by President Hadley and prominent graduates. A public report issued to-day President Hadley announces that important changes have been made in the entrance requirements at Yale to meet the needs of high schools in various parts of the country.

No matter how important the study of Greek may seem to us," he says, "we cannot afford to break the connection between Yale and the public school system of the country. If there are two fitness Yale has prided herself on it is upon being national and being democratic. To be national she must get boys from all sections. To be democratic she must get them from public schools as well as private ones.

Owing to the growing difficulty of high schools throughout the country to prepare pupils for Eastern colleges and particularly Yale, changes will be made in the academic faculty of Yale has now made it possible to substitute French or Greek.

DIPLOMAS FOR 85.

The ninety-seventh class graduated from the State Normal School at Salem to-day, eighty-three girls and two young men being awarded diplomas by Mrs. Ella Lyman Cabot of the State Board of Education. The address to graduates was by Dr. David Snedden, commissioner of education, while Rev. Thomas C. Cleveland made the prayer.

VICTORY FOR FOSS' EXPERT

Harvey Chase, Governor's expert, who filed the Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens's has followed Mr. Chase's recommendation that the monthly statements of the Commonwealth's financial condition be "comparative statements," showing the condition at the same time a year previous.

When Bank Commissioner Arthur B. Chapin was State Treasurer he issued comparative statements. Stevens changed the order of things. To-day he issued a cash statement for the six months ending May 31st, 1911. It was a comparative statement, showing the condition for the same period ending May 31, 1910, as Chase had advised.

The statement for the six months just ended is as follows: Cash on hand December 31st, 1910, $6,889,207.70; receipts, $12,410,361.02; total, $19,124,381.07; cash on hand May 31, 1911, $5,945,288.70.

The statement for the same period last year is as follows: Cash on hand December 31st, 1909, $5,178,107.25; receipts, $12,017,816.61; payments, $13,052,308.25; cash on hand May 31, 1910, $4,143,616.01.

The comparative statement shows that the State Treasurer handled on May 31st $1,801,672.69 than it was on the same date a year ago.

TWO WEDDING JOKERS SHOT

NEWARK, N. J., June 20.—J. Walter Force was to have wedded bail to-day by Recorder Conolit of East Orange on the charge of shooting Walter Lesvengood and Hugh Porter, members of a party which he ended him and his bride last night at their home.

Force returned last night from a short wedding trip and found about thirty automobiles in front of his residence. The guests had come for the infair.

Force refused to stop. The reply was more noise and some one of the pistols kicked in the door of the house.

Force got his shotgun, and thinking that the men were shooting toward his bedroom he fired with one barrel. Two men dropped, Lesvengood being hit in the stomach and Porter receiving flesh wounds.

Detective Walter Goffrey of East Orange was sent for. He took the bridegroom from his home and locked him in the jail, the bride following and weeping bitterly. To-day Force was brought before the bail. No bail will be granted until it is positive that Lesvengood and Porter are out of danger.

NIGHT MESSENGER MEASURE TO PASS

The House of Representatives to-day agreed to the Senate amendment to the bill prohibiting the employment of boys under twenty-one years of age in the night messenger service. The amendment exempts from the provisions of the bill boys employed by telegraph companies as messengers. The bill now goes to Governor Foss.

HOUSE REFUSES MONEY AID TO MAN INJURED BY STATE

In spite of strong efforts made in his behalf, John Henry Chance is to receive no reimbursement from the State after serving eleven years in prison for a crime he never committed. The House this afternoon refused to admit a resolve to pay Chance a sum not to exceed $10,000 for his unjust confinement and his prison suffering. The resolve needed a four-fifths vote. It failed by a vote of 126 for and 65 against it. The adverse decision comes as a great disappointment to Chance and his friends, who argue that the pardon granted Chance by Governor Foss was only the barest justice to an innocent man, and that his long term in prison should need further reconsideration than mere restoration of freedom.

ACCUSED OF KILLING LYNN BOY

A murder charge may be made and a warrant asked for Lynn within a few hours by Mrs. Mary La Plant of No. 87 Sheward street that city, as the sequel to the strange disappearance of her son, Francis La Plant, on February 13 last.

Through her attorneys, Francis V. McCarthy and Ernest Gringas, Mrs. La Plant will ask for the arrest of a well-known Lynn man.

Mrs. La Plant thinks that her missing son was drugged, murdered and buried in a building in the vicinity of Market street. It is said that one of the reasons why the sorrowing mother thinks her son met with foul play and burial on those premises is because of the noxious stench which she has been told pervaded there not long after his disappearance.

She has information from friends and private detectives who have worked on the case which leads her to suspect a man with whom it is said her family were at odds because of the attentions he paid to a daughter of Mrs. La Plant. He had been a forbidden acquaintance with this young woman, it is declared.

Mrs. La Plant says that on February 15, and when her son Francis left home he was going to keep an appointment with the man whom she thinks dealt foully with him. The missing man then had, she said, $100 in his pocket. He also had $9.00 on deposit in a Fall River bank which has never been touched. His mother thinks that if he is still alive he would have drawn some of this money out of the bank and also sent her word of his whereabouts.

DOUBLE DROWNING BELIEVED A PACT

WORCESTER, June 20.—Miss Ida Storalo of Elizabeth street and her fiance, Olaf Maurita, their friends believe to-day, drowned themselves in Lake Quinsigamond Sunday in accordance with a death pact. The police are dragging the lake in the hope of recovering the bodies of the young couple, each of whom was twenty-two years old, near the spot where they found a half-submerged canoe with the girl's hat in it. Miss Storalo had contracted tuberculosis and was about to go to the State sanatorium at Westboro.

Bond of No. 25 Yarmouth street, South End, on June 11, was to-day sentenced by Judge Barnard of two months at the House of Correction. Miss Kimball is also held charged with passing a bogus check at the Fernscroft Inn on June 12. On the day of the automobile trip Miss Kimball was with two other young women, and they used the machine for ten or twelve hours.

CHAMPAGNE DINNERS TOLD OF IN DIVORCE SUIT OF DE CORDOVAS

Testimony before Judge Grant in the Court of Probate on the hearing of the petition of Mrs. Alice de Cordova for separate support from her husband, Dana de Cordova, a well-known broker, revealed some interesting facts regarding the social life of the couple, and also developed evidence regarding champagne suppers at The Hotel Lenox at which de Cordova was alleged to be present with Mrs. Alice Miller Jones, a pretty, young divorcee of No. 18 Arnside street, in the Back Bay.

De Cordova took the stand in his own defense at noon. He denied most of the charges which had been made against him, and he had of none he told his wife that if she wanted a divorce he would let her charge him with some act of cruelty, and that he would be willing to make up with her provided that relations could resume a happy aspect.

Marriage Only a Fad.

Harry Hildreth, of Marblehead Neck, brother of Mrs. de Cordova, started the court with some of his revelations about his sister's married life. He said Mrs. Cordova had a high temper, was nothing but a fad, anyway, and that he had only been married a few years.

When the husband was testifying, Mrs. de Cordova sat a few feet in front of her counsel room. She leaned forward as if to catch every word from his lips. After every startling statement she became flushed as he continued his testimony to Judge Grant. At times she appeared to be nervous, and several times put her hand to her face.

De Cordova, when called, testified that frequently in the afternoon of Mrs. Jones sent to one side and looked very much as if a drink of something well up revealed, and flowers and veil to match. She would then have followed her. Mrs. Jones became the same becoming a down she had on previously.

De Cordova was questioned by Mr. Aldrich.

Tilts With the Lawyer.

There were some signs of sorts at the spirited replies of Mrs. Jones, and court officers were obliged to frown and to rap frequently for order. Mrs. Jones was not a very willing witness and she had several sharp tilts with Mr. Ogden, who conducted her examination.

The verbal fireworks began almost with his first question, which was: "Is your name Ida Hying?"

"I have none," was the answer the witness snapped back.

Q.—You mean to say that that is dead? A.—No.

Q.—Then you mean to say that you are divorced? A.—Yes.

Q.—To return once more to the subject we were talking about yesterday, when were you with Mr. Cordova? A.—On of March 11.—A.—I was with him in a party at the same.

Drinks at the Party.

Q.—For how long were you with him at that party? A.—About three hours, I should say.

Q.—Did they have anything to drink at that party? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have anything to drink? A.—I always do both when I am out and when I am at home.

Q.—Did Dr. de Cordova leave you at 2 o'clock that morning? A.—As I said you have no right to ask me about his going into with my mother.

Q.—You have no memory of that evening was of Mr. de Cordova and your mother drinking at about 2 o'clock? A.—No.

Q.—Is it a fact that Mr. de Cordova arrived at your home at about 2 o'clock in the morning? A.—Yes, he also had drinks for at night.

Reads From a Diary.

During her testimony Mrs. Jones referred frequently to memoranda which she held in her hand in plain sight. At this point Mr. Ogden interrupted the witness to question her about these memoranda. She said that they were excerpts from the diary of Mrs. Moulton, who with her husband, had been with Mr. and Mrs. de Cordova at a number of dinner parties.

Mrs. Jones declared that the notes were furnished by Mr. Aldrich for the defense.

As he had announced Mrs. Jones for the plaintiff, Mr. Ogden thought it improper for the witness to refer to papers furnished by the opposing counsel. He asked Mrs. Jones to show him the notes. She refused at first, but after considerable scuffling on both sides granted the request of Mr. Ogden, and the witness resumed.

GODFREY MORSE DIES ABROAD

Godfrey Morse, the well-known Boston lawyer, died at an early hour to-day at Dresden, Germany, according to cable grams received in Boston to-day. Mr. and Mrs. Morse left Boston on April 26 for a trip to Europe. Mr. Morse was in poor health. The body will be brought to Boston for burial.

Mr. Morse's career was one of marked success. He held local office and was also prominently before the country from 1882 to 1884, when he was assistant counsel for the United States in the Court of Commissioners of Alabama claims.

He served on the Boston School Committee from 1873 to 1878, in the Common Council in 1882 and 1883, was appointed on the Suffolk County Commissioners committee in 1885, and was prominently mentioned in 1890 as a possible candidate for the Mayoralty of Boston. He declined, however, to let his name be used. In politics Mr. Morse was a Democrat. He belonged to many business and social clubs in Boston and New York. He was sixty-five years old and independently rich.

Mrs. Morse, the widow, was formerly Mrs. Sidney S. Conrad, and her marriage to Mr. Morse in January of 1907, recalled the famous divorce case, which attracted so much attention at the time. Mrs. Conrad was one of the daughters of Nathan Rosenthal, who lived at No. 940 Bagnell street, and was left $250,000 to be divided among the four daughters. Mr. Morse met Mrs. Conrad, now Mrs. Morse, when he was settling the estate.

DIVORCE STORY MOVES COURT

"He beat me, he threatened me with a knife and a revolver, he tried to burn me alive, and all because I would not or could not give him money for drink," said Mrs. Susan Washel to Judge Dana to-day, in applying for a divorce in the Suffolk Divorce Court. Judge Dana granted her a decree nisi and the custody of her two children, John and Frank.

Mrs. Washel's story of the horrors of her married life moved every person in the court room. "We were married almost two years ago," she said. "From the first, my life with him was a horror. He never gave me any money, and tried to bully me out of any that I might have. Once, when I was just out of the hospital, he demanded money, and when I told him I had none, he struck me a terrible blow under the eye.

"My eye was blacked, and my lips were burst open. He threatened me with a sharp knife and with a revolver. Once he locked me in a closet, poured kerosene on the floor and set fire to it, but I escaped. Another time, when I was in bed, he started to strike me with a heavy wrung pitcher. I snatched the pitcher over my head and he did not strike."

SOCIETY APPROVES POPULAR SHAMPOO

"Few of us realize how many prominent society women wash their own hair," says Mme Mervyn in the San Francisco Gazette. "This home shampooing is not a fad but is due to the splendid results obtained by the use of a popular quick-drying shampoo made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water.

"This simple shampoo lathers freely and cleanses perfectly, being equally good for all shades of hair. It rinses easily and leaves the scalp refreshed and the hair lustrous, soft and very fluffy. Dandruff and scalp irritation disappear immediately.

"The fact that the alkali in soap shampoos has been found to cause streaky, thin, dull hair may be one of the reasons why society women have taken so favorably to this splendid shampoo in order not only to save but beautify their hair."

NEW WITNESS IN BULL CASE

A deposition to be taken to-morrow, in the hearing on the contested will of Mrs. Ole Bull, which is going on in Maine, is expected to indicate the character of the witness in the case. The deposition is that of Miss Agnes O'Neil, a daughter of Indiana Bielsky, frequently mentioned in the hearing.

Miss O'Neil was often a visitor at Lawrence Farm and at the Bull home, and is to be called by Charles R. Cobb, attorney for the will. She plans to leave within a few days for Europe. She will be examined in Mr. Cobb's Boston office to-morrow afternoon, and if the deposition is completed in that time, the hearing of the will case will be resumed Thursday morning in Biddeford.

It was announced that Anale Murray of Roxbury, a maid formerly in Mrs. Bull's employ, and mentioned repeatedly during the testimony of the last six weeks, will be the witness called when the hearing is resumed. Indications that sensational evidence will be given. Miss Murray was Mrs. Bull's confidante, is expected for a long time before her death, and knows probably more than anyone else of the strange conditions which the contestants allege surrounded Mrs. Bull.

Another witness will be Margaret Kelly, employ of Annie Kelly, who testified Friday in Alfred, Me. She also was employed as a servant in the Bull household.

While he contest on the will is being carried on in York County, Ole Bull Vaughn, the contestant, is residing in West Lebanon. Reports are that her condition is improving, and if the contest is as protracted as it promises to be, there is possibility of her being a witness on the stand. If not, she will give her testimony by deposition, according to the present plan of the contestants.

How To Get Rid Of Hair Not Wanted
(Beauty Culture.)

It is a simple matter to rid the skin's surface of hair not wanted if delatone is used. Enough paste to cover the surface is made with delatone and water, and this is left on the skin two or three minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed carefully.

The pleasing part of this is that the use of delatone is quite harmless as well as painless, and once delatone is used it rarely happens that the hairy growth returns. Enough delatone costs a dollar an ounce the price is more than justified by the results following. Delatone should be purchased only in the original package to insure its full strength and purity.

SUICIDE NOTE WARNS GIRLS

NEW YORK, June 20.—The body of Elsie Oswald of Philadelphia, who on Saturday shot herself to death for love of young John Oliver Miller of Mount Vernon, was buried to-day in Kensico Cemetery at Valhalla.

A letter found on Miss Oswald has been given out. It is as follows:

J. O. Miller, 27 Cottage venue, Mt. Vernon.

Dear Olly—Please forgive me for what I am about to do. You know I love you and what I have done for you, and now you forsake me. Pray for me, dear, and don't think too hard of me. I hope your folks are satisfied. My heart is broken. I love you more than my life, more than you will ever know, and you always said you would never leave me in spite of everything.

Pray for me dear. I don't wish to live without you, and I can't, God knows. I have tried very hard, and you are going away from me without even saying goodby. I never thought you would treat me like that. You are not only killing me, but my folks.

I have fought hard against it, but have failed. Life without you is not worth living, Olly. If you ever came back to me when I called you up you would have saved my life, but you said you did not care.

O God, have mercy! I hope the next girl you get you will know how to treat on the square. Oh, it's killing me, Olly, forgive me and pray for me. You are the only man I ever loved, and you know that.

Dear mother, forgive me, but sister will tell you as I have told her. I live at 382 Leverington avenue, Roxborough, Pa.

Olly, dear, I wish you all the luck and happiness in the world, and may God bless you.

Girls, beware of men. Don't put too much faith in them. Oh, pray for me, sweetheart; I love you. Goodby. From your loving sweetheart

MRS. MILLER.

No. 324 West Ninety-sixth street, P. S.—Mr. Miller will explain all.

The letter had been written on stationery of the Parkville Inn at Yonkers, where apparently the young woman stopped on her way to Mount Vernon.

ELSIE OSWALD, WHO TOOK HER LIFE FOR LOVE

A POPULAR ERROR

THAT RHEUMATISM IS DUE TO COLD, WET WEATHER.

The Trouble is Rooted in the Blood and Must Be Fought There, Not on the Surface.

Many people believe that the twinges and tortures of rheumatism are due to cold, damp, or wet weather, and treat themselves by rubbing with liniments. This is a serious mistake, and one which allows the disease to progress to such an extent that it is often difficult to get it out of the system. Rheumatism is a disease of the blood and can be cured only by driving the rheumatic poison out of the blood. There is no medicine that will do this so speedily and surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make the new, rich, red blood, which drives out the poison, builds up the system, and makes the sufferer well and strong.

Miss Mary L. Stanley, whose address is R. F. D. No. 4, Batavia, N. Y., tried various treatments for muscular rheumatism but without relief until she took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:

"I suffered from inflammatory rheumatism for over a year and when it first came on I paid but little attention to it, as I thought the occasional numb feeling was due to my knitting so much in the winter. I took cold and the pains became rapidly worse. They were entirely in my arms and shoulders and were so bad at night that I could neither sleep nor rest. Whenever I tried to raise my arm it hurt so that I could not move it far from my body and my hand would tremble as though I had palsy. My fingers were so swollen and stiff at the joints that I could not close them. Our doctor treated me for about four weeks, with poultices and blisters over the shoulders, but I felt no relief and gave him up for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Very soon I felt better and after taking a few boxes was entirely cured. Since that time I have never had the slightest return of the rheumatism."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are also very highly recommended for anæmia, after-effects of the grippe, stomach trouble and all general run-down conditions because of their power to make new, rich blood.

If you are interested in the remedy that cured Miss Stanley, write to-day for a copy of the new edition of our book on "Diseases of the Blood." It contains information that may save you money and suffering. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

KING IN MIMIC CORONATION

LONDON, June 20.—A magnificent coronation preliminary was enacted today in Westminster Abbey, when the dress rehearsal for the coronation was given. The best of Peers and Peeresses were attired in the robes they will wear for the actual scene, and King George and Queen Mary donned rich imitations of their coronation robes. The rehearsal rivaled in splendor the actual crowning of the King and his consort as the Emperor and Empress of Great Britain and India.

Especial attention was decoted to handling the imitation train of Queen Mary's costume, which, owing to its great length, has caused considerable misgivings to its prospective bearers. The task of the canopy bearers is also a difficult one, and with an imitation velvet canopy being used for the occasion, a thorough rehearsal of the actual ceremony was gone through.

The carrying of the canopy promises to prove a hard strain on the four cavalrymen selected to that task, appointed by the Earl of Cadogan, whose friends fear he will collapse during the actual ceremony on account of his great age. Therefore, it is planned to have King George walk in front, owing to the danger of the canopy falling.

Throng Acclaims King.

The musical program was rehearsed, the deep rumbling chords swelling through the ancient edifice with stately solemnity. The choir sang the anthem, "I was glad" as the royal party entered the abbey, which was followed by the recognition. The Archbishop of Canterbury, dressed in the robes of the church, cried out as the King faced those assembled to the cathedral:

"Sir, I here present to you King George the undoubted King of this realm. Where fore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service—to you willing to do the same?"

The assemblage, led by the boys of the choir, signified their willingness by replying:

"God save King George" and "Long live King George!"

Coached by the Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Church of England, under whom the religious ritual will be carried out, and by the Duke of Norfolk, general master of ceremonies, the royal couple and all the other participants enacted the functions through which they will go in the coronation on Thursday.

The coronation honors conferred by King George, as usual, have left both joy and heartburnings in their wake. Aristocrat, professional and scientific circles will be gratified, it is assumed, by the honors conferred on Dr. William Osler, regius professor of medicine at Oxford, formerly of Johns Hopkins University, and Ramsay, who once advocated that none be elsewhere formed at sixty as having found limits of their usefulness. Dr. Osler is created a baronet.

Lord Curzon of Kedleston, whose wife was Miss Mary Leiter of Chicago, has been elevated to the peerage. William H. Lever, the soap man, gets much the second New honors were heaped on Lord Kitchener, Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Arthur J. Biggs, the King's private secretary, and many others. Twenty new baronets were created, nine new knights of England and many others.

Throngs who assembled at Westminster during a preliminary rehearsal for the purpose of enabling the participants in the coronation ceremony to become familiar with the route over which the King and Queen for an instant as they were arriving and departing from the Abbey. The visit of the King and Queen on this occasion was made as privately as possible.

Among the dignitaries present were the Duke of Argyle, Duke of Devonshire, Somerset, Wellington and Castle; Archbishops of York and Canterbury; Marquis Lansdowne, Bellingham, Cromartie, Cheltenham, Aberdeen, Shaftsbury, Rossberry and Cadogan; Lord Kitchener and the Lord Mayor and the Duchess of Devonshire.

BETTER TO STARVE THAN HAVE HUSBAND ROB, SAYS MRS. SAUNDERS

I HAVE not formed any plans as to what I and baby shall do. But I am young and full of hope. Before I was married I earned my own living and I suppose that I shall have to do it again.

But oh! this is a terrible thing to me. I am still so dazed from the shock that I have not been able to think of any plans for the future. I would rather live on bread and water or go out and work to help support my husband and myself than to have had him commit the crime he did, thinking that he was doing it to help me and our baby.

From what I have said you can see that I have not had a particularly happy time since I came to America. I loved my husband and I feel sure that he loved me. I do not believe he would have ever dreamed of doing such a terrible thing as he did unless he was driven to it by the idea of helping me and my baby.

I hope if my husband is arrested that these things will be taken into consideration. As for myself, I shall give up my whole life from now on to my little baby. —Mrs. Robert Saunders, wife of West Thornton robber.

BANDIT'S WIFE'S STORY

parents are well to do people. They moved about in America a great deal, having lived in Canada and Seattle. My husband is a graduate of Bates College at Lewiston, Me.

Robert kept asking me over and over to marry him and finally I consented. He had considerable money previous to his marriage, but lost it as I understand it, in some sort of stock speculation. But he always seemed anxious to work and appeared to be thoroughly able to take care of himself and me, and so we were married at Lincoln, N. H., on the fifth of last August.

Lost Goods in Fire.

My husband, although a college graduate, had not studied for any particular profession. He is a bright young man and was able to turn his hand to almost anything. He is familiar with machinery and knows how to cook. He is also a painter.

After we were married he obtained employment as an assistant cook with the Vezey Lumber Company at West Thornton. I boarded there for a while and then went to live in another place, where I kept house. It was in this place that we had the misfortune to have a fire, in which we lost almost all of our property.

We left West Thornton last March and came to Boston. We lived then at 48 Shawmut avenue. My husband had no steadfast employment as a painter in the Fore River ship yards, but as I understand it, though we would get a long very well.

My husband worked very hard and was very good to me. He did not drink and he spent practically all of his evenings at home with me. He put in the time at home in talking or in reading the newspapers or magazines. He was a great reader. All the time that we were in Boston none of his friends came to see me and I did not know any of the men with whom he worked.

We were expecting a little baby early in June and knew that we would have to have some money ahead to take care of it. We had saved up for that event about $25, when we got acquainted with a couple who lived in the next room to us. The young man said his name was James McCarthy, and his wife said that her mother's name was Crowe and that she lived in Jersey City Heights, N. J.

Aided Penniless Couple.

McCarthy was out of work and they were in a pitiful condition. They had nothing to eat and no money with which to pay their room rent. My husband felt pity on them and helped them out of our small store of provisions—the money we had laid by for baby. It was really baby's money that we gave them.

Finally my husband got McCarthy a job at the Fore River shipyards where he was employed, and he promised to pay us back the money that we had lent him, but after he had worked two weeks, he disappeared and did not give us back a penny.

I want to say here that neither my husband said about working nights, Sundays and holidays in order to increase our income. Is absolutely true. He could not have worked any harder or more steadily than he did. Whatever he has done I will say this for him—he did work best to support me and take care of me while he was with me.

We moved from the Shawmut avenue house to No. 48 Waltham street. I should say about six weeks ago. It cause him for my baby to be born and as I had heard a great deal in favor of Dr. Elizabeth's Hospital in West Brookline street, I decided to go there. The cost was $3 as an entrance fee and $25 for the two weeks that I would have to remain there.

Gets News in American.

My husband continued to come and see me in the evening while I was at the hospital, and he was there after baby was born. My little daughter was born two weeks ago Sunday. My husband kept coming regularly until last Tuesday. He had been working for a man named Erkman at Melrose, after he lost the painting business.

When he came to see me on Tuesday he told me that he was going some place else, as I think it was in Chelsea, to do some painting for Erkman, and that he might not come back for a short time. That is the last I have heard from my husband until I read the information in Sunday's AMERICAN that he sent to that paper. He was to have come for me on Saturday, but any time was all right. But after my friends in South Boston read of the crime he was in they came for me on Sunday evening and brought me to their home.

My husband has not written to me and has not communicated with me. I am not for fear that the authorities may trace me. I know that he is in a great deal of trouble. It is probably best for him to come to Canada, as he has said. He has been in Canada many times and probably would be able to find friends there.

Regrets Desperate Act.

I am awfully sorry that he thought it necessary to take such desperate means to provide for me and the baby. I know that he feels now that it was an awful mistake. I know that woman very well, also and the other man robbed at West Thornton. She is a very good woman and I am sorry that my husband did that act.

One thing I am awfully glad—and that is my husband did not use the revolver on any one. I feel sure that he would not want to injure anyone in that way. There is nothing of the brute about him. He was always gentle and kind and never so much as suggested to me that he would ever go to such lengths as he did. In his most desperate days I do not know the man who went to West Thornton with my husband. The name that the man gave, Howard, is not his own, anyhow, as I understand it, in communication to the AMERICAN. My husband would not let me know if he contemplated any such deed as that carried out at West Thornton, because he knew that I would not countenance anything of that kind.

I have no relatives in this country with the exception of my sister, and I have no intention of communicating with her. I do not wish to see any one who knows me until I can prepare to go to some quiet place as soon as possible and try to earn a living for myself and child.

This terrible disgrace has come upon me, and it is all I can do to stand it, but I have resolved to make a fight for the life and health of my little child. My parents in Ireland are dead.

There is no one over there to whom I could write for help.

I do not know where the parents of my husband are. They may be dead, too. My husband's people are Irish, and I always understood that they were well to do. The money which my husband had and which he lost in speculation—nearly $3,000—came to him through his grandmother in Ireland.

From what I have said you can see that I have not had a particularly happy time since I came to America. I loved my husband and I feel sure that he loved me. I do not believe he would have ever dreamed of doing such a terrible thing as he did unless he was driven to it by the idea of helping me and our baby.

I hope if my husband is arrested that these things will be taken into consideration. As for myself, I shall give up my whole life from now on to my little baby.

I have not christened baby as yet, but when I do I am going to name her Estelle Lilling Saunders after dead sister of Mrs. Saunders. My husband often talked to me of his sister and we planned that if our child was a girl she should be named after his sister.

SAUNDERS HEARD FROM AGAIN IN A LETTER TO MILL MAN

Robert A. Saunders, the Bates College graduate, who wrote an amazing confession to the Boston AMERICAN, after having a hand in a hold robbery at West Thornton, N. H., has been heard from again and also by letter.

E. C. Frye, local manager of the Zeasey Lumber Company, at West Thornton, has just received one from the highwayman in which the fugitive, who says he was forced into crime because he lost his job while his young wife was a patient in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston and about to give birth to the child which is now two weeks old, states he is on his way to Canada and that it will be useless to follow him as he knows the country through which he will travel.

It is evident that Saunders is still buoyed up by the remarkable nerve which carried him to escape through a cordon of 200 armed men after the robbery.

Saunders wrote Frye that he was sorry that Frye was not in his office at the time of the hold-up, as he would have liked to have shot him. From what can be learned about the darting fugitive he is holding deep resentment against Frye because the latter discharged him last Winter. But the lumber company manager says he only took this action because Saunders brought liquor into the West Thornton camp.

In the letter from Saunders to Frye he takes the time and trouble, while escaping from the long, strong arm of the law to state that he admires the courage shown by Alice Head, the company's bookkeeper, during the hold up.

Sympathy for Young Wife.

Much sympathy is being shown by the public for Mrs. Saunders, the sorrowing wife of the man who is seeking a refuge in Canadian wilds, and who is now hundreds of miles away from her and their home. Offers of assistance have been made to her already through the newspaper and the AMERICAN will forward any contributions it receives. A Worcester young man, who says his salary is $15 a week, writes that he will contribute $2 a week towards paying Mrs. Saunders's rent until she is able to take care of herself and child. Her husband had planned to take her from the hospital on Saturday last, but dared not show himself there after his pal, John Howard, had revealed his name to the police. After his identity became known Saunders had to plunge into the labyrinth of the northern wilderness to evade arrest.

Bandit's Young Wife and Babe.

Mrs. Robert Saunders and her two-weeks' old baby. From a photograph taken yesterday for the AMERICAN. Mrs. Saunders, who tells the simple story of her life romance, of her marriage to the man who was driven to robbery for love of her, plans a life of work for their newborn babe.

New Way to Treat the Hair

The air is full of floating dust, dirt and disease germs, which get into the hair.

There is a natural oil on the head that holds the dust fast, and in a short time you have dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

The pores in the scalp are stopped up, the hair roots get no nourishment, and then the hair begins to fall out. Cleanliness is the one thing needed.

Tonics, renewers, invigorators and hair growers do not and cannot remove the dirt that causes the trouble. You need Birt's Head Wash, the new scientific preparation. This will put the hair and scalp in a healthy, natural condition, so that faded, lifeless hair may resume its natural color.

There is no alcohol or ammonia in it, as they are said to make hair turn gray prematurely.

Birt's Head Wash is made of Refined Creamy Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. There are no better things than these known for cleansing the hair and scalp, and any doctor will tell you so if you ask him.

In hygienic tubes 25c., at drug and dept. stores.

HAVEMEYER, JR., DEFENDS TRUST

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Horace Havemeyer, only son of the late sugar king, Henry O. Havemeyer, appeared before the House committee investigating the alleged Sugar Trust today and made an eloquent defense of his father.

Horace Havemeyer, who is only twenty-five years old, furnished the committee with little information about the details of the Sugar Trust, but he impressed every member of it with a son's pity for the misery of his father. He declared that his father was not the financial pirate that some men have tried to make him out; that he was a philanthropist, and that his consolidation of the sugar industries in 1887 was for the good of those industries.

"My father's company at that time," said Mr. Havemeyer, "was in better shape than most other companies, and my father's condition to offer was not from any lack of business or to combine them."

He testified to the $10,000,000 of common stock in the National Sugar Refining Company, about which there is litigation, and which stands in the name of James H. Post, president of the National company, but is alleged to belong to the Havemeyer estate.

Young Havemeyer said that if he could obtain possession of this stock, he would make the National Sugar Refining Company a competitor of the American Sugar Refining Company.

The witness told the committee that trusts are good things for the country, although he admitted that they should be regulated.

"Trusts," he said, "have a great deal to do with the commercial growth of the United States and are necessary to that growth."

HARVARD MEN IN BURGLAR CHASE

Two hundred students of Harvard took part in a burglar chase early today, when two armed men were found in the room of Robert H. Webb of Conant Hall, one of the largest student buildings on Oxford street, who awakened to find the men riffling his dresser.

The cries of, "Stop thief" and "Help!" aroused most of the sleeping students in the four-story building.

The burglars dashed down the long corridor by which they had reached Webb's room, and before any of the students could overtake them had jumped out of the second story window to the ground.

For some time there was the wildest confusion in the big dormitory. The men on the upper floors believed the burglars were still in the building, and they chased about, all yelling, and the fact that all were in pajamas prevented students being mistaken for burglars.

Webb said: "I was awakened by a noise in the room. I awoke to find two men standing in front of my dresser. They had a scuffle between them and were throwing my things into it as fast as they could work.

"I gave a yell and leaped from bed. The men dashed for the door and reached it before I could intercept them. They dashed down the corridor and leaped out of the window without stopping for a second. They had entered by this window and had left it open. This fact prevented me from capturing them."

Webb, making a hasty inventory of his belongings, found that his Panama hat, shoes, two cigar cases, two gold rings, tennis racquet, trinkets and pins and a pocketbook containing between $20 and $30 were gone. It is said by the students that other rooms have been rifled.

FEDERAL POKER PLAYERS SCORED

ACTION URGED ON RECIPROCITY

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.
Editorial Correspondence of the AMERICAN.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Yesterday was an impromptu field day in the Senate and, therefore, an unusually live and exciting day.

The Senate is always vital when it does not think so much or think it thinks so much.

The Root amendment was up in order and for a reason nobody seemed to know what to do with it.

Root was present, returning and triumphant. The Root amendment was deferred because Root declared he was anxious to speak on it until next Wednesday, a distant race and remarkable concession known as constitutional courtesy" which darts off the expense list of the government to give Root time to collect the scattered pieces and speak.

So that in the uncertainty of the situation the Senate fell to a desultory debate, which is always a long ways better than a prepared and foreordained discussion.

Senator Works of California started the ball in motion by remarking that he was a long ways from home, that he sighed for the breezes of the Pacific and the fleeces of California, and that he was everlastingly anxious to quit the Senate habit of doing nothing.

Urges Prompt Action.

Senator Penrose said there were speakers against the bill who would want to be heard, that in his judgment the best thing to do was to fix a date for the bill at once. If they did that Senators would get busy and outline the duties and hours of their speaking and would be forced to conform to them, and would get through with a limited time.

After Senator Penrose's very sensible remarks the Senate sat up and looked at each other for about ten minutes and said nothing. Whereupon the ancient Gallinger from the State of New Hampshire, rose up and remarked that for the first time in thirty years there did not seem to be enough conversation to go around in the Senate.

The solemn and serious Penrose repeated the thrilling eloquence of the New Hampshire solon, and declared it was indeed an extraordinary situation—that the flood of eloquence seemed to be altogether dammed up.

Smoot Wants to Go Home.

Senator Smoot, of Utah, who has been aforetime exploited as a diligent advocate and friend of one Senator Aldrich, politically deceased in the Senate, smiled the smile of a many married man and declared he, too, would like to go home, and that quickly.

Whereupon Joseph Bailey, senator from Texas, ventured to remark that the Mormon senator would have to possess himself in patience that the chance of seeing his domestic paradise would be rather dim until the ides of September or October unless the Senate would make up its mind to consider the farmers' free list, the wool schedule and other matters presented by the House. He (Bailey) was ready, after a fair debate, to take a vote, and if the Republicans would agree, he would urge his Democratic colleagues to enter into an agreement to vote on reciprocity one day and on the farmers' free list the next.

Mr. Penrose thought he could report on this matter about the first of August. Mr. Bailey thought it might be even later, but suggested that if he could be assured of two Republicans on the Finance Committee to vote with him, he could get a vote on the farmers' free list and the wool schedule in quick order.

At this point Senator Dixon leaped to his feet and declared that all hope of good Protectionist, he felt that whenever the time came that the spirit of protection was carried to the point of offering the farmer, as it did in the Reciprocity bill, there were several votes on the side now counted as even Protectionists who were averse to tacking up for favorable consideration of free chemicals, steel and other manufactured products.

Bailey interrupted him by saying: "Get enough votes from your side, and we will get together and form a complete "Free Bill."

Bailey Is Pleased.

Nelson of Minnesota, suggested why not put the coal schedule and free list on the reciprocity bill.

Said Bailey: "Mr. President, this is the most gratifying session of the Senate I have attended for many years."

Therefore, being in a mellow mood of freedom and appreciation, Mr. Bailey launched into a defence of the Lumber Trust, and the wood pulp monopoly, which furnished much revenue to the government.

Finally, and in conclusion, Mr. Bailey remarked that the reciprocity treaty was surely going to pass, and that for his part he intended to offer an amendment to attach the farmers' free list to it.

Then Senator Dixon leaped again to his feet to say: "If you will in good faith support the farmers' free list as an amendment to reciprocity, I think we can get enough votes on the part of those who are supremely interested in the farmers on this side to pass it."

Mr. Reed remarked: "You need not fear but we will vote for it. But we will not join a band of legislative assassins who plan to kill reciprocity by amendment. The farmers' free list bill will come up, and gentlemen who now profess to love the farmers so much will have a chance to show their affection by their votes."

In the midst of all this Senator Gore, who sees more than most Senators, because he does not see at all, remarked that if the Senate could keep the church bonks open long enough the Democrats would find enough converts to save the State.

John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, whose cue is always to be found in a running debate, remarked that whenever he found a lucid interval in the mind of a Republican President that he, as a Democrat, liked to encourage it, but the Republicans by all the evidences had no other disposition than to strangle it.

Attack Amendment.

Then Mr. Williams proceeded to shoot holes through every phase of the Root amendment, making plain its hypocrisy and demonstrating by implication, if not by statement, that it was conceived in malignant dislike to the newspapers, at which both Senator Lodge and Senator Root, whose misdeeds have suffered most from newspaper frankness, looked as innocent as if they had never been touched by the superdon. Taken altogether it was a Democratic day, pure and simple. The Republicans wobbled. The Democrats stood in defiantness and daring. The insurgents swung low in their chairs and fifted, coyly without doing or saying anything that was definite. It was plainly evident from this rending debate, which was the event of the day, that the Republicans and the opponents of reciprocity are simply sparring for wind, waiting for some speeches to which they can strong on technical suggestions and sophistical replies.

SINKS DESPITE GIFT OF BLOOD

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Mrs. Lake Lea, whose husband, Senator Lea of Tennessee, underwent the operation of transfusion and sacrificed a quart of his blood in a desperate attempt to save her life, today is in a critical condition at Georgetown University Hospital, where the operation was performed. Mrs. Lea was reported to have scarcely a fighting chance to live. The physicians in charge of the case issued the following statement:

"Mrs. Lea's condition is very critical, and it is expected that she will not live through the day. However, we hope to be able to save her. Senator Lea's condition is not serious."

The Senator's wife has been ill for several months. Yesterday afternoon her vitality began to ebb swiftly, and Doctors H. S. Frey and George Tully Vaughan told her husband that there was but one chance—the infusion of a healthy quantity of blood from some strong, healthy subject, if they could find one.

"I am the subject," said the Senator instantly. "I'm ready as soon as you are," and he removed his coat and bared his muscular arm.

The doctors did not know whether his blood and Mrs. Lea's would mix. They would have to make a test. A small quantity was drawn from each. But before the test could be completed, the wife sank lower, and an immediate transfusion became imperative.

"It's a gamble—a chance," the doctors said.

"Take it," said Lea.

Several times the surgeons, seeing the senator's increasing weakness, wanted to disconnect the tube, but he forbade them, and the blood transfusion went on until he sank into senselessness.

All the merry-go-rounds at Revere Beach have been closed up by Chief Clair P. Chaines of the Revere police, the action resulting, the police say, because of the proprietors of the merry-go-rounds refusing to have special policemen at their places of amusement. The unexpected closing up of the five merry-go-rounds at the Beach aroused the anger of the managers of the places, for they allege they had not been given notice of such action by the police.

TAFT FETE FOR PUBLIC TO-NIGHT

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The reception of the cosmic philosophy of Mr. Taft, which will be delivered from the White House as a climax to the reception given there to-night by Mrs. Taft, will be the most elaborate of the Washington season. It has involved at the expenditure of much time and expressed a desire to see the President in action, and it is expected that tonight the White House will be a veritable mansion of delight.

An imposing crowd, including many of the diplomatic corps, will be present. Some time last night during the White House was illuminated from top to bottom every floor that helped to make the reception a magnificent affair. Even the luxurious hangings will be changed for the occasion, and the whole building was ransacked to select a suitable color scheme for the decorations.

Mrs. Taft has had all possible help in the preparations for the reception, and it is expected that it will be a success.

Berlin Girl Who Aids Workers

Miss Gertrude Israel.

It is all very well for the German Emperor to theorize about three k's for women—kinder, kuchen and kirsche—children, cakes and church. But to-day the German Haus frau as people in America think of her, has almost joined the dodo and other extinct species. For German women to-day are just as busy fighting for their rights as any militant English suffragette.

Thirty thousand of them organized into something which may be spelled but not spoken—the Kaufmannischer Verband Fuer Weibliche Angestellte," sent a representative to the recent convention of the Women's Trade Union League here.

And Miss Gertrude Israel, the delegate from these 30,000 women, brought a message of earnest, determined effort on their part to raise their wages, which are, she says, worse than in this country.

"German women work for lower wages than women in this country, even taking into consideration the difference in cost of living," says Miss Israel. "And the thing they are working for first is to raise the general average. We are afraid of this minimum wage idea that you are working on over here, because it might result, if it went through, in some of the girls being paid less than they are now. What we want is for every girl to get more.

"But I must be very careful how I talk about this, because I do not want to give the impression that conditions are all around worse in my country than here. They are not. There are—what you call them, conspicuous. Our society is very different entirely. We have no Federation of Labor, no centralization the way you have it here. But, on the other hand, we have wonderful labor legislation, the grandest in the world. And we have a very fine system of workingmen's insurance and pensions.

"Every worker in mines, factory, agriculture, in domestic service and all commercial employes earning less than 2,000 marks, which is about $500 per year, is taken care of with compulsory insurance. He is insured against old age, infirmity and unemployment. Also, factory workers get accident insurance, which is paid by their employe, and widows and orphans of workingmen get pensions.

"We also have insurance for being out of work, which is paid as long as the person honestly tries to get another job. So you see, with all these kinds of insurance, we do have compensations for the very low rate of wages.

"Miss Israel is very conservative about comparing conditions in the two countries. She speaks slowly, using delightfully unexpected phrases sometimes, and stopping to ask if that is the correct word, or how to express some idea, but she has a remarkably delicate accent for a lady who has never been in this country before.

"There are big differences between Germany and this country," she continued, "because of the different form of government. Germany is an empire, and Prussia, which is the ruling country, exerts a most conservative influence. It was only a few—what do you call a ten years' decade?—years ago that it was only a few decades ago that no one was allowed to join the Socialist party. And not until 1908 were women allowed to join any political party. Consequently, there is not so much of an interest among women in having a vote, as there are more interested in improving their wages and their direct conditions.

"Our greatest handicap is that we are burdened with the traditions of hundreds of years. We have many social classes, and they make very different social problems, just as over here you have many, many nationalities to deal with, and that makes complications for you that we do not have. On account of the evils of our aristocratic system, Socialism is much more important with us than it is here. Everybody talks about it and is interested in it. Personally, I am not a Socialist, but a Democrat. However, I am entirely in sympathy with the Socialist party."

Miss Israel, who is twenty-nine years old, is the daughter of a wealthy Berlin merchant. Her father died when she was fifteen, and, owing to financial losses, she has been forced to earn her own living since she was a child. She began as a clerk in a publisher's office at forty marks (something less than $10 per month). Since 1901 Miss Israel has taken an active interest in the woman's movement.

FALL RIVER HAS AUTO CARNIVAL

FALL RIVER, June 20.—One of the most brilliant parades of automobiles ever seen in New England winds its way through the streets of Fall River to-day as a part of the celebration of the 160th birthday of the founding of the city's mammoth cotton industry, which is the cause of a week's celebration that has quite distanced anything ever attempted here. Fully 2,000 automobiles from all parts of New England are here taking part in Fall River's great Automobile Day.

The long, chug-chug cars are brilliantly decorated. Tons of flowers—roses, water lilies and wild flowers—are used in the decoration of the cars. The most wealthy residents of the city are competing for the handsome list of prizes for the best-decorated cars. One automobile agency has a dozen magnificently adorned cars in the parade.

Headed by Fire Autos.

The parade is headed by the two fire department automobiles. These machines are the finest type of the development of the automobile industry to include a fire-fighting force.

The parade forms on Highland avenue and passes over the following route: To Winter, to Franklin, to North Main, to South Main, to Pleasant, to Quarry, to Bedford, to South Main, to East Main, to Globe, to Broadway, to Middle, to South Main, to City Hall. At the latter point the city officials and the parade committee review the cars and select the prize winners.

Fully 50,000 people are gathered for the parade. The automobiles proceed over the route at a ten-mile clip. The route was very carefully selected so as to give people coming in by all the suburban car lines a good opportunity to witness the parade.

Grand Fireworks Display.

This evening there is a grand display of fireworks at South Park. It will be the most elaborate display of pyrotechnics ever seen here.

To-morrow is Fall River Day, when the big "Trades' parade will be the leading feature. Thursday is Mechanics' Day and there will be a horse show in the afternoon and carnival parade in the evening. President Taft arrives Friday, and the day is given over to his reception and entertainment. Saturday is Aviation Day with aeronautical exhibitions and a water carnival.

Ideal weather has favored the celebration so far. Fall River appeared at her best in gala day attire, with a wealth of color and decorations both in the business and residential sections.

Streets Are Thronged.

The streets were thronged with people, as most of the mills having suspended operations for the week, while the railroad trains and trolleys bring in great numbers of visitors and sightseers.

The opening event was the crowning of the Queen of the Carnival, Miss Marion F. Hills, daughter of George H. Hills, president of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association. This took place on an elevated stage in front of City Hall and in presence of a vast concourse that packed the square and nearby streets.

Miss Hills, accompanied by her ladies-in-waiting, flower girls and other attendants in a court costume, arrived in decorated open carriages through the center of the city to City Hall accompanied by a cavalcade of patriots.

Miss Hills Crowned Queen.

The attendants to the queen were Miss Florence Waring, Miss Louise G. Borden, Mrs. Agnes Lathrop Smith, Miss Marion Brayton, Miss Gertrude Thurston, Miss Margaret A. McWhirr, Miss Ruth Charlton, Miss Florence Horton, Miss Clara F. Davol, Miss Ida Ackley, Miss Elizabeth T. Hills, Mrs. Harold R. Barker, Mrs. Robert R. McWhirr, Miss Alice T. Davol.

The flower girls were: Dorothy Durfee, a niece of Colonel Joseph Durfee, founder of the first cotton mill in 1811, and the daughter of Nathan Durfee; Jean Marshall, Phoebe Poole and Louise Borden.

Reaching the coronation stage, Queen Marion and her entourage were received by Mayor Thomas F. Higgins, who delivered a brief address of welcome and congratulation and concluded by performing the coronation ceremony, with these words: "In the name of the city of Fall River I do now crown thee queen of the Cotton carnival."

The Queen's Proclamation.

The newly crowned queen then read her proclamation, reciting a history of the development of Fall River since its first cotton mill was established, 100 years ago, and its wonderful industrial achievements since. In closing the proclamation declared:

"She today assumes the garb of maturity, her people will show that she is exemplified in its best and fullest sense. The hitherto is on the outside. We extend a cordial welcome to our homes, business and public places. We earnestly request all to join with us in celebrating the centennial week.

"We desire to greet our friends of neighboring cities, towns and hamlets, and to welcome all, far and near, to come and view the wonderful products of our industries; and we in return declare that they will be cordially received and most royally entertained.

Gates of City Wide Open.

"The gates of our city will be swung open wide and 'Welcome' is the watchword of the hour. Fall River looms up. As queen, exercising the prerogative vested in me by the people, I declare on this joyful occasion the carnival formally opened.

"Done at City Hall, this 19th day of June, in the year 1911.

"MARION, Queen of the Carnival."

At the Bradford Durfee Textile School and the State Armory are the expositions of the industrial products of the manufacturing establishments of the city, which in their bewildering variety are a revelation to most people here who have until now had a very inadequate conception of the many local industrial enterprises and the character of the output of many of them.

Another fascinating, unique and most appropriate feature of the big celebration is the exhibition of historical relics, antiques and curios at Music Hall, collected and displayed by the women of Quequechan Chapter, D. A. R.

If you are not, may we point out to you the manifold advantage of becoming one?

In the first place, the AMERICAN is offering in this contest an absolutely unprecedented and unparalleled group of prizes.

These prizes include a $2,500 Seashore Bungalow, two High Grade Runabout Automobiles, two Handsome Power Boats, two High Grade Pianos, two beautiful Motorcycles, besides a great number of other attractive and costly rewards, making the entire list richer and more valuable than prizes in all.

Glance at the list of prizes printed on this page.

In the second place, the Proverb Contest is, in itself, peculiarly fascinating.

There is a gripping interest in the famous old saying or the philosophers, which have become the household words of all lands, and which are, therefore, familiar to all.

Young and old will find delight in solving the daily pictures in the AMERICAN.

Picture number 3 appears to-day, and for the convenience of those who have delayed in starting to solve the pictures, numbers 1 and 2 are also reproduced on this page.

Solve them, and then keep on solving the pictures, day by day, until all seventy-five have been published.

The enjoyment you will get out of it will be worth a great deal as well as the valuable prizes which you may win.

In the third place, the Proverb Contest has a distinct and permanent educational value. Parents will readily realize the importance of instilling in the minds of the young, the wise and useful proverbs which have had so great an influence upon the life through all the ages.

In this connection we would call particular attention to the Proverb Book, which is being printed by the AMERICAN, and which is soon to be issued as an aid to contestants.

The helpfulness of this book is obvious to every discerning mind: when one knows that he has, in a printed book, ALL of the correct solutions of the puzzles in a competition of this sort, one feels great confidence in his or her ability to reach the correct conclusions.

For instance, suppose one is in doubt about a certain proverb puzzle; if that case one knows that in the Proverb Book, somewhere, is printed out in full the answer to the doubtful puzzle. In a short time one can run through the entire list of proverbs in the book and select the one which is most applicable to the picture under consideration. These helpful Proverb Books will soon be ready for distribution. Send your orders now, and a copy of the Proverb Book will shortly be mailed to you. Remember, it costs you only money to enter the contest.

The prizes are so valuable, so attractive, that a glance at the prize list should be sufficient inducement for anyone to enter this contest. Never before has such an imposing array of awards been offered in a competition of this kind. When you consider that the only requirement is just a little healthful mental exercise each day, the liberality of this educational offer can be seen at a glance.

The best time to enter the Proverb Contest is RIGHT NOW.

It always pays to begin AT THE BEGINNING.

You are a contestant as soon as you begin to solve the puzzle pictures. You do not have to send in your name or to be nominated. You incur no obligation whatsoever.

The pleasure of solving these pictures will be a boon to many during the hot sultry months that are now with us.

You can sit in your hammock at home and think these pictures out—at the seashore, at the mountains, in the country—any place and anywhere this contest will furnish interesting recreation for idle moments, with an opportunity, too, perhaps, to possess yourself of a $2,500 seashore home or any one of the other 1,000 prizes. If you are not fortunate enough to win first prize, remember there are 999 other prizes of value, and each one is something that anyone would be glad to be the owner of.

Read carefully the rules and conditions and the prize list of this contest, and make use of the intellect which God gave you—there is no other requirement.

READ CAREFULLY—

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participation in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering this contest.

Each contestant or any of the members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Duplicate answers must be separated, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All prizes will be awarded absolutely on merit, and no partiality will be shown to employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all at one time.

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand on better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEAD-QUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person within 5:30 o'clock p.m. limit. It is earnestly requested in giving out this idea to two weeks after publication of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the care of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass.

Those contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not obligatory.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

MORISON PLAYERS IN MUSIC COMEDY

"Man Who Owns Broadway" Cleverly Presented at the Majestic.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

If you have ever believed that Wilson Melrose was not a musical comedy hero, or that Eleanor Gordon was a stranger to high notes, you were mistaken. There was convincing proof at the Majestic Theatre yesterday that both Mr. Melrose and Miss Gordon tremble at nothing the stage can produce—even flights into elusive melody.

Of course, "The Man Who Owns Broadway" could never have been produced if these two interesting people were not sure of their ground, and it may now be officially recorded that the first two performances of George M. Cohan's musical farce at the Majestic left no regrets.

It is needless to say that the audience was with Mr. Melrose and Miss Gordon to the last trembling note, and it may be established that the trembling note was not due to uncertainty, but because the man who wrote the music had clearly indicated it in the score.

Tears—But of Mirth.

The sudden departure of Lindsay Morison's company from the field of legitimate drama to the more or less doubtful musical farce brought on tears, except those of mirth. It was an occasion of extreme gaiety on both sides of the curtain. As the most popular actor on Broadway Mr. Melrose was all there. He could sing, he could make, and he found himself in such cheerful company—meaning pretty chorus girls—that it may be difficult for him to desert his pleasant surroundings when the melodramatic "Zaza" demands his attention a week or so hence. At least that was the impression one gathered yesterday after watching Mr. Melrose for three sunny acts.

Not once did Mr. Melrose falter when put face to face with the kind of thing George Cohan writes. No one would ever have suspected that he was not there for a long campaign.

When Miss Gordon, things ran evenly and successfully. As a young woman keenly in love with a musical comedy star she behaved exactly as you might expect she would—straightforward and designing, like if she was a little sentimental. Blame the author, not Miss Gordon. Like Mr. Melrose she attacked the vocal end of her contract bravely and appeared rather friendly with the high C that flirted with her throat occasionally.

In mentioning Miss Gordon's faithful work it might be added that her dress maker was also something of a success. A Ziegfeld show girl never staggered across the stage under the weight of Miss Gordon's, and if her frock was cut a trifle deep under the shoulders, nobody flinched.

Given With Good Cast.

Mr. Morison's company gave the first stock production of "The Man Who Owns Broadway" the benefit of labor that was substantial. It was the kind of effort that makes theatregoing worth while. Conspicuous in the cast was Russell Hall, who had a singing voice of quality. He was also the youngest and neatest villain of the season.

Miss Lillian A. Hibbard played the doubtful role of Miss Curtis like an adventuress right out of melodrama, and Miss Dwyer was also to be heeded. A certified cuss for $100,000 out of a gay old boy in the Klondike was somewhat tiresome if the name was genuine. Edward Nannery, who played the gay old boy, was no frivolous liar. He deserved to lose the money.

Rockliff Fellows sang one song, as if he knew what he was doing, and William Hassell had one brief scene in which he attempted two impersonations. Miss Valerie Valaire was a graceful ingenue and Rose Morison was amusing as a maid.

The result of this first experience of Mr. Morison's company in musical comedy was encouraging. It supplied wholesome amusement in numerous parts.

Castle Square Theatre.

What do you think you are worth? Not a forced sale, nor an auction, you understand, but in a lottery. How many thousand, do you suppose, would pay a dollar for a chance at your hand and heart? The whole thing is worked out at the Castle Square Theatre, where they are presenting "The Lottery Man." The man in question, who gathers in about $300,000 (in stage money) from the chance he takes, is Dolly Wagner, a lake.

Jack Wright, here, played by Donald Meek, decides that he needs the money. He is in debt as the result of fortunate Wall Street ventures. He is a newspaper man. Imagine a newspaper man wanting money enough to buck Wall Street. At any rate, Jack conceives a brilliant scheme to put it to the managing editor. The able M. E. accepts, and the thing is worked up.

For a dollar and a coupon from the paper you can buy a chance in the lottery. If you win, you marry Jack or get a share of money, as may be decided. After the scheme is launched Jack falls in love. He is drawn in the lottery by Lizzie, a scare-crow servant girl. At least she looks the winning ticket. Then it is discovered that she has obtained it by underhand means. Eventually everything ends in a complicated tableau of joys, with Glooms falling over the footlights.

Donald Meek's play is funny as a barrel of monkeys, and the players do it all thoroughly well. Donald Meek, you all know. George Hassell is Foxey Peyton. He's good, too. Gertrude Binkel plays Lizzie's difficult role, and Florence Ryan is Helena Heyer, the lovely heiress. Honorable mention for Mabel Colcord, who plays Hedwig Jensen, the Swedish maid. The others are all good and they combine to present a delightful evening.

Keith's.

Keith's Theatre this week is "Swept by Summer Breezes," something new in the line of Summer vaudeville entertainment. The "Summer Breezes" are blown by the "Meistersingers," composed of the Harvard, Schubert and Weber quartets, and the piece includes an excellent program.

The members of the quartets are as follows: Harvard—Jewell Boyd, first tenor; Lester Bartlett, second tenor; Wirt Pattipps, baritone, and John Thomas, bass. Schubert—Harold St. Tripp, first tenor; Charles W. Swaine, second tenor; William W. Walker, baritone, and Charles Steele, bass. Weber—A. C. Prescott, first tenor; A. F. Coley, second tenor; G. H. Woods, baritone, and W. E. Davidson, bass.

The feature of the act is Onito, the original Palmer Cox "Brownie" who does a unique and fascinating elf dance, which is winning much applause. The stage setting is laid on the veranda of a summer hotel with a marine background. It is a typical beach scene with the singers in suting clothes.

Nat Haines and Will Videcq, the famous blackface team, furnish the most of the comedy this week. Haines has got a lot of good stuff besides his famous "Sic him, Prince, lick a city boarder." George B. Snyder and Harry Buckley's "Two-man band" is a novel musical act that is going big.

Leona Thatcher and Harry Madison in "On a Shopping Tour" are one of the best things on the bill. They have a bright burlesque which brings out their exceptional powers of mimicry.

The Great Richards is a wonderful dancer whose terpsichorean effects are greatly enhanced by an intricate lighting arrangement of his own. The five Princellas have a fine juggling act and Delmore and Oneida in their posing and gymnastic act are among the best in their line.

Paragon Park.

Paragon Park is coming into its own with the arrival of genuine Summer weather and Manager Dodge is convinced that by enlarging the seating capacity of the Palm Garden he made no mistake. He might have carried his expansion still further for the crowds that overflow the park Sunday put a severe test upon the capacity of the big dining room. Some new novelties that greet visitors to Paragon are found in the free open air circus and in the lagoon, where lively aquatic stars are having the time of their lives splashing in the water.

Globe Theatre.

One of those big laughing shows for which the Globe is famous entertained crowds all day yesterday. The vaudeville portion of the program is varied, in which Joe Weber and his dancing girls contribute a pleasing specialty. Grimm and Satchell, two rapid-fire comedians, entertained with a novelty skit, and Melvin and Thatcher had a laughable travesty on baseball "fans." Norman, the Frog Man, presented one of the best contorting novelties seen in a long time, his setting and costume adding materially to the excellent act. The pictures were all good.

Colonial Theatre.

With only "Dr. DeLuze" remaining in town the season at first-class theatres has settled down to the Colonial, where the merry musical play seems to be scoring at every performance. With lots of pretty girls and a number of astonishing musical novelties, "Dr. DeLuze" will doubtless remain popular for some time.

Palace Theatre.

With three new reels of motion pictures that they can drop in any day and see a lively, up-to-date and interesting entertainment. There is always a good musical programme of song hits and novelties, and the cool interior of the theatre offers a delightful retreat from the oppressive heat.

Orpheum Theatre.

Several Boston favorites were in the vaudbill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. Among them were Claude and Marion Cleveland, a pair of real entertainers. Mc-Garry and McGarry, dancers who know their business, were also conspicuous on the program. Several other vaudeville novelties and a new list of motion pictures completed the bill.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The Ocean Four, a fun-making quartet, headed the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. The motion picture list was entirely new.

Austin & Stone's.

A real, old-fashioned troupe of colored singers is making a hit at Austin & Stone's Museum this week. There are also many new features in both the curio hall and the theatre.

Scenic Temple.

The new program at the Scenic Temple presents one of the best of the season, with several vaudeville novelties and a long list of attractive motion pictures.

Norumbega Park.

Improvements at the theatres give greater praise to their patrons than the big amusement place at Norumbega Park. In the program for yesterday Mlle. Cerlie and her company of French acrobats gave a wonderful performance, while the other features were almost equally as pleasing. Norumbega Park has provided a more beautiful and with the remodelled restaurant in operation visitors have no need of going hungry.

Bass Point.

The season at Bass Point and Nahant is in full swing, and with the new refreshment place at Revere Beach, now one of the stopping points for the Nahant boat, thousands are taking the easy opportunity of visiting both resorts. At Bass Point there are hundreds of amusements that attract visitors, including the hotels, where exceptionally good shore dinners are served.

Provincetown Trips.

One of the most delightful sails out of Boston is found on the new steamer Dorothy Bradford, which makes daily trips to Provincetown. There is more quaint interest in the New England coast than the little village where the Pilgrims first landed, and the trip across the bay is just enough to give the passengers on the boat a taste of ocean sailing.

Moonlight Excursion.

The moonlight excursion to Bass Point that Joseph W. Vokes of Shubert Theatre had planned for to-morrow night in the steamer General Lincoln will be run as scheduled in spite of the burning of the steamer. Mr. Vokes has chartered the steamer General Lincoln for the trip, which will leave Otis wharf at 7:45.

King Philip Trips.

There is no better way to escape the heat of the city than to make one of the trips to the fishing grounds on the steamer King Philip. Chowder dinners are served free.

LONG SENTENCE FOR AN ORANGE TIE AND SHORT FOR GREEN ONE

NEW YORK, June 20.—Judge Dike in the County Court in Brooklyn smiled when William Kelly of No. 272 Franklin avenue was arraigned before him for sentence.

"You have a tie of a most unusual color for an Irishman," the judge said, "and I shall have to give you a heavy sentence. Sing Sing for two and a half years."

William Kelly glanced at his orange tie as he made way for Patrick Kelly of No. 133 Conover street, who wore a green tie.

"Ah! the real article," Judge Dike remarked with another smile. "Penitentiary for eleven months and twenty-nine days."

Both men were charged with attempted grand larceny. Henry Alsop had on file a confession at all. He was sent to Elmira without comment.

REVEAL $10,000 GEM ROBBERY

An inventory of the goods stolen from the Frank L. Howes residence at No. 26 Hill street, Brookline, early on the morning of June 8 has just been sent out from the Brookline police to the police of neighboring cities, showing that the jewelry and silverware stolen at that time was worth between $8,000 and $10,000, fifty-five diamonds and two rubies being among the effaced property.

The burglary was a particularly daring one, the larger pieces of silverware on the lower floor of the house being found by the inmates wrapped up in valuable rugs. The burglars were frightened from the house by some unknown cause. At the time of the theft Mrs. Howes and a domestic heard the burglars at their work, but thinking that Mr. Howes might meet with some accident, Mrs. Howes did not arouse her husband.

A notification sent out by the Brookline police gave the following inventory of articles taken:

"Ladies' solitaire diamond ring, with initials "F. L. H. to E. V. H." with date; gold ring set with three diamonds; gold ring set with pigeon blood ruby; gold ring set with ruby and two diamonds; brooch pin set with ten diamonds; a number of gold watches; gold breast pin set with five diamonds; large quantity of silverware."

FISHBALL GAME FOR T WHARFERS

T wharf is all fussed up over a ball game—a kind of a fishball game—which is to be pulled off at the American League grounds next Saturday. The contestants will be Elmer Price's bunch of fish merchants and an aggregation of butchers from the Dudley Packing Company's Boston branch. Leon Paine, cashier of the Cudahy company, will be generalissimo of the meatmen and Long is French for him. Therefore T wharf is all fussed up.

In past years the ball tossers on T wharf have formed two clubs under the leadership of Pat Hales and Elmer Price, and fought for honors in a sort of interscholastic warfare. Haley's team generally won, but Elmer and his bunch were always ready to come back at them. This year Haley decided that he knew when to quit, if Cy Young didn't, and he resigned the leadership of his team. Haley has a pet pitching ball now and he decided it was time for the old man to retire.

Price gobbled up the best of Haley's old victorious team and then challenged the wharf. The wharf was unresponsive and he had to look elsewhere for foemen. A cloud showed on the horizon no larger than a man's hand. The cloud proved to be the butchers and his hardy bunch. They took up the gauntlet thrown down by the fishermen and the fight was on.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the game. The T wharf committee has commandeered all the automobiles owned in the fish business and chartered a brass band to help out in noise and display. They will gather at T wharf Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock and start for the grounds at 1:30.

The Cudahy crowd is not saying much but wear a look of grim determination on their ruddy countenances that indicate "bloody bones and no quarter given nor asked." The fishermen are fairly at the same.

Admission will be by complimentary tickets, more than two thousand of which have been issued.

NEW TEACHERS' BILL REPORTED

The new Boston teachers' salary increase bill, with a provision for a referendum to the voters of Boston, was formally reported by the House of Representatives today by a majority of the Committee on Cities. Representative Montague of Ward 10, Boston, and Dow of Cambridge dissent. They have a bill of their own which they will move to substitute for the original bill on the floor of the House when the matter comes up for discussion. Their bill does not make it mandatory upon the Boston School Committee to increase the salaries of the elementary teachers alone, but leaves it to the committee's discretion to distribute the money provided for the purpose as they see fit.

An appropriation of ten more cents on each $1,000 valuation of the city is provided, however, making the total amount to be given the School Committee for the purpose of increasing teachers' salaries 50 cents on every $1,000 valuation after 1913 instead of 20 cents as provided in the majority bill.

ALIMONY PAYERS, PRAY TAKE NOTICE

If a woman gets a divorce with alimony in any State of the Union and her husband afterward comes to Massachusetts to live she can enforce the decree of the court and compel her husband to pay just the same as though he remained in the State where the divorce was granted. This is the gist of an important decision handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court today in the case of Maud M. Wells against Percy D. Wells. On April 20, 1908, the Circuit Court of Wayne county, Mich., by which State the divorce was granted, ordered Wells to pay $585 a year in alimony and for schooling and medical attendance on a minor child. On February 23, 1909, a similar decree for $375 was made against Wells, who contested both of them on the ground that a decree of that nature could not be enforced in Massachusetts.

FALLING LOG HITS A GIRL

Miss Elizabeth M. Dicken jumped off an inbound surface car to City square, Charlestown, today to escape a falling log and was struck under the big timber, which struck her ankles and pinned her to the ground. The log weighed about 400 pounds and was run bodily at first.

Miss Dicken, who is twenty-three years old, refused to go to a hospital and was taken to her home at No. 49 Tufts street in a carriage. It is said that she escaped without any bones being broken, but is badly bruised and suffering from shock.

The car in which she was riding toward the city was just passing a disabled one on a siding and was backing to the main track, when the log fell and the motorman put on the brakes, which was lying across the rails. The log was lifted off the injured girl by motormen and Miss Dicken leaped off the car and under it.

FANS CAN NOW DECIDE ON MERITS OF SWAP

By R. W. LARDNER.

The Rustlers are now here for a brief stay and the bugs will have a chance to find out whether or not Boston was so hopelessly out-traded in the deal with Chicago, as the outcrits seem to believe.

One thing is certain—the ball players who are representing our city in the National League do not agree that the Rustlers were gold-bricked. Without exception they think the Cubs gave up more than they got and, according to them, there are athletes in the Cub outfit who think so, too.

W. Hepburn Russell, who has been given much hammering since the swap was announced, is riding comfortably in the front seat of the hired wagon, and he cordially expects to pick up a lot of passengers before this three days' jaunt is over. He told us the real story of the exchange on the arrival here, and from his statements, President Murphy and "P. T." Chance were not at all edgy in their the bargain. As has been hinted in these columns, Chance wanted Wilbur Goode more than anyone else involved in the transfer and agreed to the trade because that was the only way he could land the outfielder he was after.

"Before the deal was started," said President Russell, "we offered to trade Graham for Kling, and we made the offer with the full knowledge and consent of Vice President Page. Mr. Murphy referred the matter to Chance, and the Chicago manager turned it down cold. We made the same offer later and again Chance balked, saying, 'Graham isn't to Kling's class as a catcher and you must think I'm crazy if you wouldn't suggest such a thing.'

"When we got to Chicago on this trip, Manager Tenney, Secretary Kelley and I went to President Murphy's office to pay a social call. During our visit there, the trade talk came up and Manager Tenney said he would give Curtis and Graham for Weaver and Kling. President Murphy told us to wait, that Manager Chance would be in the office in a little while, and then we could discuss swaps.

"When Chance came in, we made the proposition to him, and he repeated the assertion that he considered Kling in a class above Graham and said he preferred Weaver to Curtis. That appeared to cut the matter and the conversation drifted to other topics. Manager Chance told us about his ailments and said his sore head and broken down feet would keep him on the bench the rest of the season. He remarked that he would like to land a good outfielder to use in centre so that Hoffman could be made a utility player. Then, suddenly, he said: 'If you want to talk trade with me I'll make you a proposition. I'll take Wilbur Goode off your hands.'

Offers and More Offers.

"Then we made offers and counter offers and Chance and Murphy went out to hold a private consultation over one of them, which was an exchange of Graham, Goode and Curtis for Kling, Weaver and Griffin. When they returned, they wanted us to count Griffin out of it, but Manager Tenney had been advised that both he and Weaver were youngsters of great promise, and no 'stock.' Chance said he would substitute Kaiser for Griffin and then we said we would give him Cullen for Kaiser. Again there was a consultation and the terms were then accepted by Chicago. There was no talk of any money on the side. We're trying to build up a ball team, not a bank. The trade looked good to me and to Manager Tenney and the fans will agree with us as soon as they have had a chance to look Kling over.

"We took Kaiser on the chance that he would be better than Cullen next season. We traded Goode because that was the only way we could get Kling. Curtis had one victory to his credit in nine games, so we weren't afraid to lose him. Griffin and Weaver will prove winners sure. As for Graham, he hadn't caught a good game for us since the day the season opened, and I think everybody will agree with me that Kling has forgotten more baseball than Peaches ever knew. Furthermore, there isn't more than one of two years' difference in the age of the men, Graham has refused to give his age, saying it was his own business. Kling and Graham broke into professional baseball at the same time. The latter is the second catcher at Chicago, and he will stay on the bench as long as Archer is in shape to work. Kling is now our first catcher and a better man than Boston has had behind the bat for years.

Club Got No Money.

"The Boston club didn't get a cent of money and I didn't either. But we did get the better of the deal and you will see it for yourself before the team has left town. Mr. Page has carefully concealed the fact that he once agreed to trade Graham every time Kling got hurt, but it's a fact just the same. And my friends tell me I own more than Kling's worth in lots of stock in the club, are not trying to ruin it.

"That was about what Mr. Russell had to say, and loyal bugs are hoping his prophecy proves true.

The Rustlers attribute one of their defeats at Pittsburg and one at Chicago to the injury which kept Steinfeldt out of the game. They are not backward about expressing approval of the deal and their claim is that the team has played better ball since Kling joined it.

Two National League teams, presumably Cincinnati and New York, have made offers for Nehf. John J. McGraw and Garry Herrmann have been willing to part with Larry Mc-Lean and a first class pitcher and the difference is that Garry Herrmann is demanding about exanging managers.

There is a new outfielder in the Boston squad. His name is a peculiar one—Jones. If he has the class of Fielder or Flack there will be no objection to his presence here. He was secured from the Providence club, O. team and is hitting well over the .300 mark. He reported to Manager Tenney at Pittsburg and may be used in the New York series.

ALL STAR BOUTS AT THE ARMORY

The all star bouts at the Armory A. A. tonight between boys who have shown their ability in the different months' bouts have appeared in should furnish enough variety to please every spectator. For cleverness, the opening bout between Tommy Flanagan of Boston and Young Micky McDonough of Brooklyn, N. Y., will appeal to those who like the scientific end of the game.

Tom Foley of South Boston and Tony Marrenge of East Boston, who substitutes for Kid Scaler, who broke his arm, should furnish enough rugged boxing in their bout of ten rounds.

Al Benedict of New York, who meets Andrew Morris of East Boston, expects to defeat Morris in just the same style as he used against Jack Reno. Morris is boxing better at the present time than he ever has and in the event of Benedict has defeated such good men as Dummy Maxson, Jim Smith, and knocked out Jim Savage in two rounds. He advises all Jack Reno's friends to be at the show as he wants them to witness the fun. This match is billed for ten rounds.

The final ten-round bout between Tommy Howell of Philadelphia, who made a hit on his appearance here with Fighting Dick Nelson, and Young Donahoe of Boston, brings together a rugged, willing performer and a clever boxer. Matches of this kind generally make the best contests. Both Howell and Donahoe are anxious to make good, as the winner will secure good matches in the near future at the ring club. Donahoe is more anxious to win than Howell, as he wants the opportunity to meet Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion. With thirty-six rounds of boxing on the program, the show will start at 8 p. m.

CORNELL FOOTBALL PRACTICE SEPT. 18

ITHACA, N. Y., June 19.—Football practice at Cornell will begin about the middle of September and freshman football practice will begin September 18, about two weeks earlier than usual. Scalet week is expected to bring back to Ithaca a large number of football alumni to attend the annual meeting of the association, and at that time Head Coach Dan Reed is expected to talk over plans with the graduates. Head Coach Reed will be assisted by Alfred Hutchison, '09, and John Newell, '06, and a third field coach is expected. Thomas F. Fennell of Elmira and George Young, now in the faculty of the college of architecture, are the graduate members of the field committee and they are expected to be of great service in assisting Reed.

LEACH IN BAD WITH BARNEY DREYFUSS

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 20.—Waivers will soon be asked on Tommy Leach of the Pittsburg club. President Barney Dreyfuss told Manager Fred Clarke last week to go ahead and ask waivers on Leach, as he was tired of the manner in which Leach was acting. Manager Clarke said to Leach Monday. Before long we'll ask waivers on you, but that does not mean that you will leave the Pittsburg club." "Go ahead, Fred," replied Leach; "ask waivers on me and get rid of me for I will certainly be satisfied." Dreyfuss thinks that Leach is playing down to form this season. Leach says he isn't and further says that his bad playing is caused by an injury to his leg.

JOE COSTER LOSES DECISION TO MANDOT

MEMPHIS, June 20.—After taking the full count in the second round of an eight-round bout before the Southern A. C., Joe Coster, the eastern boxer, fought gamely through to the end, last night, the decision going to Joe Mandot of New Orleans. Coster suffered a second knockdown in the sixth period. Only in the fifth round should did he live up to the reputation that made him a favorite in the betting. Mandot, however, finished without a scratch practically outfought the fight all the way, although Coster rarely ever backed up.

TY COBB PASSES 100 MARK FOR SAFE HITS

CHICAGO, June 20.—Tyrus Cobb of the Detroit baseball team is the first major league player to drive out one hundred hits in the 1911 season. His century it came in the eighth inning of yesterday's game with Chicago in Detroit. Not satisfied with gaining this distinction for today, he raised his total to 101 with another safe one in the ninth. Batting is not the only division where Cobb leads. His twenty doubles, twenty triples and eight home runs make him the chief of the sluggers.

"JAWN" O'BRIEN "COMING BACK"

By TAD.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Phil "Jawn" O'Brien is going to break forth again, "dawn" has quit the promoting business and has handed his "best equipped, best lighted and best ventilated quarrel palace" to the garage people.

"They have killed the boxing game in Philadelphia," says John, "with their cheapness. Why, my goodness, you can see a variety show and four fights over there now for ten cents. How can a legitimate boxing club thrive with such competition. If you can call it such? It was too much for me.

"I came over to see Jim Smith and Sailor Burke perform and if they are looked upon as fighters over here, I'm going to dispel that illusion.

"I don't know out Jim Smith in ten rounds I'll buy enough gold paint to cover up the fence around Tremont Park, and as for that Burke fellow, why, my goodness, there'd be nothing to it but a bump on the chin and the sailor doing the dying gladiator thing.

"I haven't appeared in this city since the night I fought Stanley Ketchel here, and you know what a rumpus we put up. Well, I can repeat that performance if they hand me the material. I'd just like to start with Smith or Burke, though, to show the people that there is a regular boxing person still upon the map."

NEW YORK NATIONALS BUY WESTERN PLAYER

SEATTLE, Wash., June 20.—Arthur Bues, third baseman of the Seattle North-western League, baseball team, was sold to-day to the New York Nationals. Bues will remain with Seattle to finish his season. The Seattle club received cash and a player from New York.

McKNIGHT CAPTAIN.

REVERE, June 20.—The 1911 baseball team of Revere High school today elected Daniel R. MacKnight, a junior, captain of the nine for 1912. The school loses ten of the present team by graduation this year—Captain Allen, p.; Houllard, c.; Smith, 1b.; Mayo, 2b.; Baker, p.; Phair, s.s.; Harney, l.f.; Cleaves, c.f.; Holland, r.f., and Stanton, c.

JIM SMITH QUITS LANGFORD BOUT

The bout between Sam Langford of Boston and Jim Smith, scheduled to be held June 29 in New York, has been called off by the latter. It is understood that Smith intends to go to California.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

BRENNAN DRAWS WITH MELLODY

TORONTO, Ont., June 20.—Honey Mellody of Boston and Knockout Brennan of Buffalo fought a ten-round draw here. Mellody showed his usual cleverness, but lacked steam to put his opponent away.

A Want Ad. often leads to fortune.

M'FARLAND AND MURPHY TO MEET

MILWAUKEE, June 20.—Packey McFarland of Chicago and Harlem Tommy Murphy of New York are matched to box ten rounds before the Berger A. C. of Milwaukee, June 29. Articles of agreement call for weight of 155 pounds at 3 in the afternoon on the day of the contest.

John Kling, the hero of two world's championship series, and known as one of the brainiest and best catchers who ever drew on a mitt, will make his first New York appearance in a Boston uniform to-day, catching for the Rustlers in the opening game of the series with the Giants. Kling is captain of the team and guides its course on the field. His work this afternoon will be watched with eager interest by the fans

The local public has heard much concerning the trade which brought Kling here from Chicago. Now it will have a chance to see for itself whether John has gone back or is still the same old mid to pitchers and terror to base runners.

Al Mattern will probably pitch the opening game against the Giants. Otis Crandall is likely to work against the New Yorkers. Christy Mathewson undoubtedly will serve in one battle before New York leaves Boston. Probably he will be saved for to-morrow or Thursday.

EARLEY RE-ELECTED SCHOOL CAPTAIN

Captain "Stub" Harold Earley of the Medford High School nine was elected captain of the team for the next year yesterday. Earley has played left field during the season and the team has been successful under his regime. Joe Falvey and Walter Davidson were also mentioned for the captaincy, but Earley received thirteen votes, Fahey four and Davidson two. It is a rare thing for a member of an athletic team to be elected two consecutive years.

POPULAR DECISION FOR DICK HYLAND

NEW YORK, June 20.—Bert Keyes and Fighting Dick Hyland boxed a fast ten-round draw at the Olympic A. NEW YORK, June 20.—The Red Sox play on the Hill Top again to-day. The slinging of yesterday's games threw a good into the fans and they will be out in big numbers to-day to watch the New Yorkers go after revenge.

A Cincinnati despatch says that President Herrmann of the Reds is anxious to get Heinie Wagner, the Boston shortstop, and is willing to pay real money for his release. This is undoubtedly true, for Cincinnati has been without a capable shortstop for years. But there is no chance for Wagner to become a Red.

Even if President Taylor decided to dispose of the brilliant infielder, waivers would be refused by at least four American league clubs. It is known that Clark of the New York, St. Louis and Cleveland would be glad to land a man of Heinie's ability, and they would look long at the prospect of a National League team to get him.

Boston presented a new infield yesterday. Baker, a new man, was at first; Wagner back at short and apparently in his old form, and Yerkes at third. Baker looked good until he played Wagner's fast one in poor form, failing to show any knowledge of good work, and a yell from the Boston players caused Manager Barrow to make a quick change. Engle going to the bag, where he put up a superb game, the combination across with a timely hit.

Yerkes had a little chance to show what he could do at the third corner, and while the new infield failed to show great form no doubt a little more work would make a strong combination and give the team needed batting strength.

Nunamaker caught in grand form, as did Sweeney, and both men were good on the mark when it came to fast, accurate throwing to the bases. Nunamaker killed a double steal in the sixth, when he got Hartzell at third.

AMATEUR RUNNERS IN HUDSON RACE

The "Middlesex Handicap," at Hudson on July 4, is ten full miles, eight miles over the road and just two miles on the Riverside half-mile track. Prizes will be awarded to the first five men to finish, and are to be suitably inscribed loving cups. A special time prize is to be given to the man doing the best time over the course, and this will be a gold watch. Time allowed will be made by the New England handicapper. Hudson is only an hour's run out of Boston and it is expected that some of the best pluggers in the amateur ranks will go after these handsome trophies and time prize. Entry blanks can be secured from Lawrence P. Duffy, Hudson.

Excessive
Smoking
is not so much the number as the kind of cigars.

YOUR doctor says: "Only three cigars a day." He might as well say thirty-three if he doesn't specify the kind. Smoking three strong, black, juice-full, all-Havana cigars is hurtfully excessive for men who could smoke five or six a DAY. BLACKSTONE Cigars daily without any excess at all. The reason for this:

Waitt & Bond BLACKSTONE

Cigars (10c) are made of the finest of light, aromatic Havana fillr with a filmy, neutral Sumatra wrapper, which relieves the heaviness of the clear Havana. You get the same fit ror in the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigar as in the pure Havana cigar, but without its heavy "headiness."

You actually do "cut down on your smoking" when you switch from over-rich, black, clear Havanas to the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE.

Harvard and Yale enter on their final series of games this afternoon, the first of the annual series of three games between these ancient rivals being pulled off on Yale Field at 3 o'clock in New Haven, before the Yale Commencement crowd. With the latter feature to encourage the Blue ball tossers, the Yale nine goes onto the field as the big favorite in the first contest, for it would take the perverse of Sparrus ordinarily to go through one of those contests unpleased.

Harvard begins the series with less defeats to her credit this year than Yale, but on the other hand the latter team has gone through a much more strenuous season than has the Crimson.

Teams Shaped for Game.

Yale's strength will lie in her pitching staff and a couple of good hitters, which, after all, is practically everything that a team can want to forge to the front and stay there. Either Hartwell or Freeman, either of whom may pitch this afternoon, are better twirlers than Harvard can put on the mound, but the Crimson batters have been busy developing a hard hitting streak of late and if the team holds in the style which it has been showing in the majority of the games this year, there is every reason to believe that Yale will have no laughs for all she is worth, even with the backing of the thousands of Yale men who swarm over from New York to this big game and the Commencement festivities.

Both teams are in the best of shape for the contest and every one of the three games should the series go that far, will be fully as good as any seen between these two teams in years. Harvard started the season with prospects more rosier than those of her rival, but Dr. Sexton, the new coach, has done wonders with the Harvard material, and much betting is being done by Harvard men on the outcome.

As has been said, Harvard will find her chief weakness in the batting end of the game. The cleverness which the fielders have on the whole displayed this year, however, should even this weakness up a bit. Never before has any Harvard team had the number of double plays to its credit, as has the team this year and this means much for pulling pitchers out of holes and in addition gives them more confidence in themselves. In addition the Crimson players are hitting the ball pretty consistently and when hits mean runs, several games having been pulled out of the fire in the ninth inning. The will be Harvard men defended Williams, Penney and Amberg, all of which teams faced Yale, Holy Cross and Brown both broke even with Harvard and Yale.

Harvard Looks Best.

Of course comparitive scores in baseball mean but little when two such ardent rivals as Harvard and Yale clash on the diamond, but they are given to show in a slight degree the relative strength of the teams. On paper Harvard would seem to have a bit the better of the argument, but Yale has the advantage of leghaving the series on her home grounds and a better pitching staff, and this will count in today's struggle.

Sexton, the new Harvard tutrier has been stirred to do the mound work for Harvard. His debut in the Penney game, when he held the Quakers down to five hits, stamped him as a good man and one who should puzzle the Ells quite a bit. Hartwell is given as a possibility for Yale to-day, but it seems more likely that Freeman, who has been giving an unusually good account of himself this year will start in the twirling for Yale. He will be a problem hard to solve, but Harvard hopes to get its batting eyes into trim and connect with him for some hits.

BROWN-MOORE BOUT BOOKED FOR BOSTON

From New York comes word that R. O. Brown and Pal Moore are booked to box at the Armory A. A. on June 27. The club officials have not yet received any definite information as to such a bout.

BASEBALL WINS AT FORT BANKS

Baseball will be played at Fort Banks, Winthrop, next Sunday afternoon and every Sunday during the Summer. Orders have just come to Colonel Robert H. Patterson, commanding the Boston artillery district, from Henry L. Stimson, the new Secretary of War, bearing this good news to the soldiers.

The Fort Banks team is arranging a game for Sunday afternoon. Admission, however, will not be allowed to the general public. Soldiers and their friends will only be allowed to see the game. Teams will be issued during the week, and these must be presented to secure admission.

The order of the new Secretary of War is considered a victory for the soldiers and the heroes of Sunday baseball in Winthrop. It edries out the recommendation of Major-General Leonard A. Wood, who, after visiting Winthrop and hearing both sides of the controversy, reported to Secretary Stimson that Sunday baseball should be allowed in Winthrop, but that the general public should be kept out

PICK ATHLETES TO RUN ABROAD

Captain Reginald Foster of the Harvard track team has announced the choice of men who will go to England to compete against the Cambridge and Oxford team in the international games. The entries for one event only, the hammer throw, are undetermined, and these will be decided by a special competition Thursday or Friday.

Captain Foster has just received a letter from the English managers replying to his request that the distance run at the international games be one or two miles. The Englishmen want a three-mile run, which is the event for their own dual games.

The Americans offered to have the three-mile run if the Englishmen would agree to have the shot-put added, but no word has been made of the kind yet. The American team, except that the Harvard and Cornell runners, Dorward and Valentine, will compete with Childs of Yale, some day this week, and they are making a practice to steal. Brooks has filled in nicely for the Crimson outfield and has been hitting in great style, and Kaiser has been playing the garden for Boston, but his hitting has been weak. Griffin and Collins, the other men in the deal, have not had a good chance to set. So take your pick and remember Wednesday at infield.

Agreed.

Captain Foster says he will insist that the long distance race be for two miles only, unless the Englishmen agree to the shot put, and he has cabled to that effect.

The hurdles will be run on the grass and the flights will be stationary. The Americans having agreed to this.

There will be no trials to pick the American team, except that the two Harvard and Cornell runners, Dorward and Valentine, will compete with Childs of Yale some day this week and they are making a practice to steal. Brooks has filled in nicely for the Crimson outfield and has been hitting in great style, and Kaiser has been playing the garden for Boston, but his hitting has been weak. Griffin and Collins, the other men in the deal, have not had a good chance to set. So take your pick and remember Wednesday at infield.

The team will be as follows:

100-yard dash—Reilly and Thatcher of Yale.

Quarter-mile run—Keller of Ha vard and Stewart of Yale.

Half-mile run—Preble of Yale and Jacques of Harvard.

Mile run—Hillyer of Harvard.

Two-mile run—Willington of Harvard and Hinkle of Yale.

Running broad jump—Barker of Harvard and Caldwell of Yale.

Running broad jump—Hobden of Yale and Hinkle of Yale.

120-yard high hurdles—Chisholm of Yale and Cumming of Harvard.

AUSTRALIAN FIGHTER RETIRES FROM RING

Charley Griffin, the Australian featherweight boxer, has left America never to return, as he has retired from the ring. During his stay of several years in America Griffin won a host of admirers by his whirlwind boxing and his prowess in the ring under all circumstances.

How Washington and his friends kept up their sox seems to have escaped history.

WANT $10? GET IN ON THIS THEN

Come you baseball fans. Get in your words about that big Chicago-Boston deal. The contest closes midnight Wednesday so you have but a short time more to get a part of that $25. The first man to write in does not get the money, but the best, so you have just as much chance now. Get busy.

Letters have been pouring in by the hundreds, but there is still a big chance for good opinions. The AMERICAN has hung up $25 for the best letter of fifty words and twelve will receive a share of it. Ten dollars goes to the best letter and $5 to the next, so if you are thinking about making a little easy cash, send in your opinions.

You fans that have not yet sent in your letters have had a big chance to consider the work of the men concerned in the deal during the past few days. Two of the Boston players that went to Chicago have been playing every day and two of the former Chicago players have been performing regularly for Boston, so you can dig up the dope and figure it out yourself. Johnny Kling has started a baseball school for the Boston players and by so doing he will most likely have the men ready to play and reel off the plays that made the Chicago club famous. Either to favors to chance.

Warren won his only game that he has pitched for Boston when Wilson caught, and while Graham is playing the star game for the Giants he is not slipping all the pointers that Kling is giving out to the Boston players. Stanage has filled in nicely for Chicago and has been hitting in great style, and Kaiser has been playing the garden for Boston, but his hitting has been weak. Griffin and Collins, the other men in the deal, have not had a good chance to set. So take your pick and remember Wednesday at infield.right.

CREWS PRIMING UP FOR RACES

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, RED TOP, CT., June 20. Yesterday was the hottest day at Red Top since the arrival of the crews, and in consequence the work of the men was of light order. In the morning Coach Wray in his single took out each crew repeatedly and coached them on their individual boats. He then took the varsity eight down stream to the Navy Yard, taking several fast sprints on the return. The stroke ran up as high as thirty-nine.

The finish was much better and the side work was better. The freshmen eight and three fours also went down stream to the Navy Yard and back. Wray is particularly pleased with the way the freshman boat is traveling, it seemingly improves every day.

In the afternoon Yale's oarsmen had an excellent view of their rivals in action, as the Crimson boats, the first time in several years, ventured as far as Allyn's Point, where the men paddled around for about an hour.

On the return to the quarters, the freshmen four-oared crew had a short brush, the varsity winning by about a length.

Among the visitors at the quarters yesterday was "Jack" Richardson, captain of the 1908 eight, and Elliot Cutler, captain of the 1909 crew. There were no changes in the boat yesterday.

Business Notice.

Do you know good clothes when you see them?

WE ask the above question in all seriousness. Many people admit that they are unable to tell the insides of a suit by the appearance of the outside. Those people are intelligent—they leave expert matter for experts—they depend upon the opinion of people who have made a life study of clothes.

A coat can be stitched together in a sweat shop at a cost as low as $1.50 for labor. It can cost as high as $10 to $12 for workmanship alone, without wasting a cent. You can readily imagine the difference in skill and conditions under which the coats are made.

Every suit sent out by the great firm of Alfred Benjamin & Co.

New York City

is made as well as it is possible to make a suit of clothes at the prices charged.

These prices run $18 to $40 for suits—and no man who intends to buy a suit can afford to miss the opportunity of inspecting and trying on a Benjamin suit at our shop.

Let this be your invitation to call.

TOM McNAMARA--

There was no game yesterday. We did not know it until we hiked all the way out to the league grounds and were informed so by "Blinky" McSmith, the ground keeper, who was fussing around the diamond getting things ready for the next series.

The "Yung Amerika Malgumated Nationals" is the hardest league in the country for a baseball expert to follow. We never know what is coming off until it is off. We have been barred from all secret meetings and are shivering in our boots for fear that some of these days our season pass will be taken up. Somehow or other all our attempts at getting advance information are blocked.

As near as we can find out, the reason that there was no game yesterday is that "Eaglebeak" Spunder, the pitcher of the Wild Cats, had to stay home and help his mother clean house, so Shrimp Flynn called the game off, knowing that he would be beaten with a crippled team. Even though there had been a game yesterday and the Wild Cats had won, it would not have helped them any, as the Wasps already have copped five straight. This entitles them to play the winner of the next series between the Starfish Giants and the Umpertees.

All that "Shrimp" Flynn and his team can do now is to practice faithfully and try and do better next time.

"Puggy" Mullane, "Great Unknown" is still mystifying the public. We know as much about him now as we did when he first appeared on our horizon. The front window of that vacant house, through which he disappears all the time and never comes out, was boarded up yesterday when "Puggy" went down to take a look at it. He is now a sore about this, and the fellow who "it had better look out. "Skinny" Shanez was accused by him yesterday, and came pretty near getting a good lamsna in the jaw. Emily Horton just happened to be around in time to save him from getting badly damaged.

There is a rumor around that "Eagleseak" Sprunder, who jumped from the Starfish Giants to the Wild Cats last week, will be back on the job with his old team in the next series. We hear that he is going to play for "Skinny" Shaner for nothing, but we cannot verify this.

We have also gotten a flash that "Bosh" Nelson of the Umperiners, has made a deal with "Puggy" Mullane by which the "Great Unknown" will be rented to the Umperiners for their coming series against the Starfish Giants.

If this is all true we will have the same two pitchers on the job for another three games. Funny we did not think of this obedience before; it would have made a good story.

What Chance Has a Poor Boy. The Story of Some Who Forged to the Top

By THOMAS TAPPER

THE Romans gave the soldier who first scaled the walls of the enemy, a mural crown of gold; to the one who first boarded an enemy's vessel they gave a naval crown of gold; to the victorious general they gave a wreath of laurel leaves or of gold.

It made no difference to the Romans who first did one of these acts—the crown was given FOR DOING IT. Whether he bore a good name, or whether his family was unknown, it was quite the same. The rule was simple enough: Do the deed, then the honor and reward will be granted.

You can see then that, as we say in these days, "it was up to the soldier." If he had it in him he did his best, and was honored accordingly. If he hadn't it in him, he kept as far away from trouble as he could, and nobody ever heard of him.

We can always tell whether a boy has it in him to do things. Biography is full of stories showing that all a poor boy has to do is to stretch out his hand and seize upon a chance. But it also shows that no one ever stretches out a boy's hand for him. HE MUST DO THE ACT HIMSELF.

When Thomas Bewick was a little boy he wanted to be an artist. Having no paper and pencils with which to practice, he covered the walls of his mother's cottage with drawings in chalk. His father found fault with him for wasting his time in making pictures, but the boy was so determined to succeed that nothing could stop him. He kept on "reaching out his hand" toward opportunity, and became the father of English wood engraving.

Rules for a Poor Boy to Follow

The principles for any poor boy to follow are these:

1. He must believe in himself.
2. He must put his faith in hard work.
3. He must believe that heaven helps those who help themselves.

Then he can go forward, for with these three principles fixed in his mind nothing in the world can stop him. Belief in these truths will keep him constantly busy. The poor boy will find comfort and encouragement in knowing that GREAT MEN HAVE BEGUN BY DOING THESE VERY THINGS.

Ben Jonson, the poet and friend of Shakespeare, was a bricklayer, but he went to work every day with a book in his pocket. Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, was a tailor, and he took pride in being a first-class tailor. When you see an electric light turning night into day, remember that Thomas A. Edison was once a newsboy. Schubert, the great composer, was a schoolmaster's assistant as a boy. Every free moment he had he read poems and set them to music. In his eighteenth year he wrote one hundred and sixty-five songs.

Sir Walter Scott, one of the greatest English-writing novelists, used to spend his spare time, when a boy, copying office papers so that he could buy a book with the extra money. Bach, the great German composer, used to walk the streets of his native town, singing from door to door, for pennies.

The poor boy looking for a chance soon learns that everybody who ever succeeded had to do the same thing. He must believe that when a chance to work has been found, the man who finds it must stake it out like a miner's claim and work it for all it is worth.

The Story of Dr. Young.

The poor boy who believes in himself should remember what Dr. Thomas Young once said:

"Any man can do what any other man has done."

He proved it himself. When he was six years old he was studying Latin; at nine, he could read Greek; at thirteen, he read Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac and Persian; and at fourteen he was a teacher of classical languages. Sir Humphrey Davy, who was, as a boy, an apprentice to an apothecary, said of Dr. Young: "He knows so much that it is difficult to say what he does not know."

Now, how does a boy of fourteen succeed in knowing many languages or in doing anything worth while? HE SUCCEEDS BECAUSE HE IS DETERMINED TO SUCCEED. Nobody in the world can put anything into another person's head. He can suggest it, but the other man must take it and learn it, if he wants it.

Many boys and girls think that, if they only had money, they could do things and get on in life. As a matter of fact, the important thing is not the money, BUT THE DESIRE TO DO THINGS.

The world will help any one who has made up his mind to push forward. It may be a hard push, but the crowd will always cheer a boy who makes things move.

What chance has a poor boy?

A merchant once hung a sign in his door at 8 a. m., announcing "Boy Wanted."

The Boy Who Got the Job

At five minutes past eight a freckle-faced youngster came into the merchant's office, CARRYING THE SIGN.

"Here's your sign, sir."

"What do you mean by bringing that sign up here?" asked the merchant. "I want a boy."

"Well, I'm the boy," he replied.

And, of course, he got the job.

Now, what would a boy have done who was not looking for a chance? He would have waited for the merchant to write him a nicely worded letter asking him to be so kind as to call. A lovely thing to expect, but merchants do not do it.

Don't be afraid to tell the merchant you are the boy he wants IF YOU ARE SURE YOU MEAN IT AND ARE WILLING TO MAKE GOOD.

Merchants are always looking for that kind of a boy.

David Livingstone, the great African missionary, went to work in a cotton factory when he was ten years old. When he had paid his expenses from his first week's wages he spent the balance for a Latin grammar. Though he had to go to work at six in the morning he often sat up so late at night studying the lessons HE PICKED OUT FOR HIMSELF that his mother had to take his books away and send him to bed.

Now the poor boy looking for a chance is the one who picks out lessons for himself and does them.

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By G. DORSET

Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers.

NOW what said I saw her heart and that it was a good one, even if, like the rest of the pioneers, she was trying to make what she could out of the West. She was very independent and broad-minded, and when I answered, "All right," she said, "I mean I'll stay forever, not just a month—forever!"

And she has, as far as to-day carries out her forevers along.

Then she spit on her finger, and touched her iron.

"M' iron's cold!" she exclaimed. "Lawsy me! And I've left Mr. Kirkland's shirt all sodgy, and I must skit along down stairs."

Hardly Thanked Him

When Fanny went East, Stephen wouldn't hear of her working any more. He bought the little Bracketsville house and let and gave them outright to Fanny, and a monthly income—enough to live and dress on. For the boy he didn't do anything, and Ferdie kept on where he was and paid his share. Fanny hardly said thank you to Stephen, but she accepted, and we didn't care. I really believe I would have let her work had it been hard. Work has never seemed to me the worst of it, anyhow. I hardly ever heard from Fanny except when she acknowledged the checks, as she always did, but I knew she was taking French and was very much thought of in Bracketsville, and that she made a first-rate home for Ferdie. She never told me any of her plans or anything that she did except in the briefest details, but I had letters every week from Ferdie and he kept me posted.

It was three years after Judge Banfield had left us his house when I got a letter one afternoon in the 5 o'clock mail. I was sitting in the arbor sewing. It was in September, and the red apples hung nearly ripe in the trees. Miss Purchase brought the letter with a bunch of bills and the grocer's book, and laid them on the rustic table by my workbasket. The letter was fat and in a strange hand, and it was on ship's paper with a red dog and seal. At first I thought it was from Pete, but he had no reason for going on a line.

Fanny Married.

When I opened it I saw it was from Judge Banfield, dated the week before on the Britannic, and it began:

"My Dear Lady"—that made me think of Mr. Sinclair for a minute—"It will be just three years from the time I sat with you in the arbor of the old place when you got this letter. The weather is fine in our Western late Septembers, and there will be some shafts along the grass, and finer yellow shafts in the apple trees. I know those trees, for every one I planted them all. The creek will speak as it did the day I left you there, and be the only voice to disturb your quiet. I loved the place, and for that reason I gave it to you. It has been a pride and satisfaction, a triumph, to think your feet walk the paths I laid out, and tread my stairs and my rooms, and that your first wash was made by me. When the time came that I could do so without too much lying and too much disinclination to be fair to her, I did what you honored me by asking, and married your sister. Fanny is a beautiful woman; she is your flesh and blood. Just above the line over the ear, where the hair grows straight and less curly, there is a look of you, when I discovered this I asked her to be my wife. If this fulfilment of your wish pleases you, brings you any satisfaction or content, if the fact that your sister's future is assured and protected in so far as I can assure and protect it, if this brings you any peace, I am rewarded.

"Believe me, my dear lady.

"Your's faithfully,

RICHARD BAXFIELD."

I held the letter there in my lap for a while with my sewing. The sunlight, as he said, lay on the arbor and on the apples and on his woods. It made me feel very deeply and very still. I thought it incomprehensible that a man could do a thing like this and do it for me. I couldn't understand it. It made me ashamed to think of what I had taken from him, and when I thought of Will and Mr. Sinclair I was more ashamed than ever. That night I told Stephen that Judge Banfield had married Fanny, and they had gone off on their honeymoon to Europe.

"I am sincerely relieved," he said, "and sincerely surprised. I never expected Fanny to have the common sense to do a thing as genuine as this. Women like your sister, my dear girl, usually die old maids. It's women like yourself who marry, Esther," and I couldn't help asking him, "Why, Stephen?"

"Why, because you are the mothers of the earth, my dear girl, the reason for the race, the excuse for being, the hearthstone and the stove."

I told him he was too silly for any use, and I wouldn't let him go on. You just couldn't get a sensible reply out of him when you wanted it.

"It's because we're the cooks and the nurses and the slaves," I couldn't help saying, and he looked at me very seriously:

"It's because you are the ideal women."

Four Years at Oretown

Stephen's interests ran through the district as far as Carson City. He went there often, and East to New York several times on short visits, but I never moved from Oretown until we had been there four years, a heard a great deal of O. & W. N., and it was rapidly nearing the time when all you had to say to people was "the Big N." and they knew. It is a generally understood thing, I dare say, that Stephen bought the State and the district in the first election—not those money did talk always, no doubt about it, but it has the same voice everywhere; and on one who had not watched my husband as I had watched him in that crude little place would ever know how just he was, understood how popular he was, simply as a man. If he had been a poor man he would have carried the polls with the way they cared for him. From Miss Purchase, who nearly lifted herself over his shirts, starching time—and nearly drove me crazy because she rough-dried and sent up my clothes pretty nearly as they were half the time down to the blacksmith at the outskirts of the town where Stephen took his riding horse to be shod, my husband was a generous favorite. He treated every one politely and often I have seen him standing talking with the school mistress or some simple woman on a March day, the wind blowing through his hair, his hat in his hand, until I saw neuralgia on every hair of his head. The women in Oretown never had a chance to flirt with him, though, for on "his branch" (as he called Oretown) he was too deeply absorbed to look at anything but law and politics.

When it came time to go through the circle on the campaigning tours he went alone and sent me telegrams that flew over the wires thick—at first, before he got too absorbed. I used to gather what I could from the Oretown Cry—his paper, of course, and crazy about Stephen. He was running for Governor, and Oretown was wild for him; most of the Democrats went over to his ticket, and such a lot of the city took the cars over to the capital that they had to run extra trains.

Running For Governor.

There wasn't a tale against my husband so old and worm-eaten but they raked it up against him, and if I had had any illusions about the man I married they would have been pretty well worn out on this campaign. Finally, poor Miss Pagee's sister died in the East, and they told how she had drowned herself to escape scandal, and it made me sick—and they raked up his habits and the whole thing! Before the election I got a wire from Stephen telling me to come to Carson City, and at the same time there came a notice over from the Junction to say there was a private car rolled in for Mrs. Kirkland. Miss Purchase and I packed and shut up in twelve hours, and started. The train had directions to take the branch road. It was sunset, and when we passed beyond the old house, Miss Purchase and I in a private car, it didn't seem as though it could be true. Quite a way out we stood on the rear and looked back, and the sunset shone on all the Oretown windows as red as fire; but the blinds were shut in Judge Baxfield's house, the windows of our old room. When the smoke from the Bluehall Buttes factory had disappeared and Oretown wasn't any bigger than a piece of paper on the plan, Miss Purchase said:

Task for a Magician

WHEN Grover Cleveland's little girl was quite young, her father once telephoned to the White House from Chicago and asked Mrs. Cleveland to bring the child to the 'phone. Lifting the little one up to the instrument, Mrs. Cleveland watched her expression change from bewilderment to wonder and then to fear. It was surely her father's voice—yet she looked at the telephone incredulously.

After examining the tiny opening in the receiver the little girl burst into tears. "Oh, mamma," she sobbed, "How can we ever get papa out of that little hole?"

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Why Lysander John Decided to Live and What Followed.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has not always been as patient and philosophical as we find him in his old age. There was a time when he resented neglect and injustice; when he was hot-headed and impatient, and when he nursed his wrongs, real and imaginary.

Goaded to desperation by an ill-managed home, and a business that didn't always move as it should, the machinery was oiled, he often thought of the futility of the struggle; and what was, at first, a dim, undefined longing to escape, finally grew with good nursing to the determination to kill himself, and one day he went home with that purpose in mind.

"I am unhappy, of no use to anybody, and will be better out of the world," he argued.

He found his wife gone when he reached home. "So much the better," he thought.

"I will cut my throat," he said, and hunted up the butcher knife. But he hacked and slashed and hacked at his throat, and the knife was so dull he couldn't even penetrate the skin. Then he tried the bread knife and it was duller than the butcher knife.

"I will hit myself on the head with the axe," said Lysander John, but he looked and looked and looked, everywhere from the cupboard to Daysey Mayme's top bureau drawer, and couldn't find the axe.

Finally, in the potato box, he found the handle, but the head was missing.

"I will try the scissors," he said, but he hunted and hunted and hunted, before he found the scissors, and at last, when almost discouraged, he found them in the pages of a novel on the parlor table, where Daysey Mayme had used them for a book mark. But they were so dull they wouldn't cut thread, so he gave that up.

Then a Bright Thought came to him. "No wonder," he said, "my wife is a poor housekeeper when she has to use such dull tools in her work and has no place for them; I will not kill myself; I will live and be of use to my family."

So he began to sharpen the knives and scissors and he found the head of the axe and fastened it on, and made himself its custodian, to see that it had a place and was always in it.

He found he had a never ending task to keep knives and scissors sharp and everything in its place, and was so busy he had no time left for pitying self.

And his wife, with knives and scissors that will actually cut, and some one to tell her where to find them, has reason to be the happiest woman in her neighborhood.

The Usual Role

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, in a recent interview, pointed out the folly of ignorant speculation.

"The average man, with no knowledge of finance," he said, "has no business to speculate. Let him do so and his case is Jones's all over again.

"Jones stepped in at a garage one morning to see about selling off his two automobiles.

"'I heard you've been speculating on the Stock Exchange, Mr. Jones,' the agent said, politely.

"'Yes,' said Jones. 'Now, these cars, understand, can be had cheap for cash.'

"'Were you a bull or a bear, sir?' asked the agent.

"'Neither,' said Jones, gruffly. 'I was an ass.'"

Couldn't Use Coal

A NOTED Southerner tells the following:

"One of the negroes on my place did me a valuable service once, and I wished to show my appreciation. After paying him, I asked:

"'Now, uncle, which shall I give you, a ton of coal or a big bottle of whiskey?'

"'Massa John,' he replied, 'yo shorely knows ah only bahns wood.'"

Desperate Desmond

AIRSHIP "TARGET"
THE VILLAIN DESMOND WILL BE SHOT TO PIECES AND HE WILL TROUBLE ME NO MORE! MY LOVER CLAUDE WILL GUARD HIM FROM THE ROW BOAT!
FIRE!
NOW FOR THE WHIRLING DERVISH ACT, HA, HA, HA, HA!
SAVED! THE CANNON BALL HAS HIT THE AIRSHIP! I'M SAVED! I'M SAVED! AND I'M FREE!
OH!
LOW, CLAUDE! CLAUDE, YOU ARE IN MY POWER AT LAST! I WILL PLAY THE FAR EASTERN SCENE!
HA, HA, HA! I'LL BE THE WILY VILLAIN! I'LL COVER YOU WITH MY REVOLVER! HUNTERS WITH YOU!
I DEFY YOU, DESMOND! MY ROSAMOND WILL NEVER BE YOUR WIFE! NEVER!
HA, HA, HA! I'LL BE THE VILLAIN!

The British Navy is going to have a little target practice with Desperate Desmond as the target. We don't know how those guys class as marksmen, but they ought to be able to hit him at that distance sooner or later. His car won't go away, because he is tied fast and suspended from an aeroplane. Besides, Claude is on guard below.

What's this whirling dervish business? Is the villain trying to rattle the gunners and make their aim uncertain? Yes, dear reader, that is precisely what he is trying to do. But we don't see how it is going to help him.

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

The very first shot strikes the target squarely on the top, breaking it in two and letting the villain drop. But if Claude is still rowing around underneath in his boat, he will take mighty good care that Desmond does not get far away. Our brave hero means business this time. He intends to see that the villain gets what's coming to him.

Where Claude made his fatal mistake was in being directly under the target. The result is that Desmond drops right on top of him, thus making it impossible for our hero to grab the cur and take him back to the ship. And what's more, Desmond's flowing pajamas will be on the job very soon to rescue their chief and capture Claude.

This is one of the most absurdly crimes that Desperate Desmond ever attempted. He has ordered his wild men to put Claude into a hollow tree and leave him there to die of starvation. Claude is gagged so that he cannot cry out and tell any one of the terrible plight he is in. In our country they send men to prison for less crimes than this.

Desmond's plan is working out even better than he thought. Two wood cutters are sawing the tree down, and one brave hero will be cut to two before his presence is suspected. In the meantime, the villain is going to try to steal Rosamond. We don't know how he will manage it, but we'll see in to-morrow's pictures.

A Neglected Husband's Plaint

The Advent of a Baby Has Often Been the Cause of a Separation

BY DOROTHY DIX.

ALL of you married women, who have little children, give heed to this letter, which is a really, truly, bona fide heart wail that I received in a mail the other day. This letter said:

"I have been a married man for ten years, eight of them very happy ones, but strange as it sounds to say it, my domestic felicity has been ruined by the coming of our little child. I, myself, give our child all of a father's love, but my wife is obsessed by her devotion to it.

"All of her love has gone to the child, and I am no more than a boarder in our little family, my wife maintaining different apartments, bestowing all of her affections on the child, and never even taking any interest in me, or my affairs.

My wife has also become careless of her appearance and does not try to look attractive any more; nor will she ever go out with me, because she prefers to spend all her time with the baby. She has a bank account in her own name, besides all the money she wants for household expenses and dress, and I can't induce her to dress herself up and look like other women.

"She says that all her time is taken up with the baby, and, when I mention that I see other well-dressed women out with several babies, she claims that they either neglect their children, or have regiments of servants, which I know is not true.

Feels Like a Mere Boarder.

"As I said, before, I am just a mere boarder in my own house, except that I pay all the bills, and give my wife more money than she asks for, so that she may not have that excuse for being shabby and confining herself so close to the home.

"Now I am tired and discouraged at this way of life. I want the love of a wife, the attentions of a wife, the companionship of a wife. How am I to make this woman up, and make her see that she has some duty to her husband as well as her child.

"Is it fair that I should sacrifice all of my happiness for the sake of raising and educating this child, that I also love, or would I be justified in supplying money for his education and upbringing and allow the mother to do it—then that is all she cared for—while I go my way and seek happiness with some woman of my own kind, and who would be a real wife and companion to me, and not just merely a nursery maid?"

I have quoted this letter at length because it sets forth, more forcibly than I could do, the proposition what many a man finds himself up against when his first child is born and when he realizes that the thing he has looked forward to as the crowning joy of his existence turns out to be the tragedy that wrecks his domestic bliss.

Maternity always works a miracle in a woman's character, but it is quite as likely to mar as to make it, so far as a husband is concerned. Many a man has seen the sweet, dainty, pretty, accomplished and interesting girl he married changed by the advent of her baby into a decidedly different slave, who had no thought or time or interest in anything except the red-faced squalling thing in the cradle.

Baby Is Her Whole Life.

Such a woman lives in moves and has her being in the nursery. She refuses to dress up because it is easier to handle the baby in a frowsy wrapper. She declines to go out with her husband because something might happen to baby if she did. She gives up her music because it wakens baby for her to practice. She cannot talk or think of anything but baby, and her society becomes about as appetizing and exhilarating as sterilized baby food.

The husband is utterly neglected. In fact, he comes to exist only as a useful and necessary purveyor to baby's needs, a provider of perambulators and calciodine, and pills, and doctors to His Royal Highness, the Heir Apparent.

Now men, except in exceedingly rare instances, have not a crazy paternal passion as many women have a maternal one. The average man accept a child very calmly, and loves it within reason. He wants to provide for it; to see that it is well taken care of; but he wants also some life beyond that.

Because there is a baby in the nursery doesn't keep him from wanting the society of his wife, and the attentions he has been accustomed to from her. Nor does it diminish his interest in her looks, or his desire to take his wife out to little dinners and places of amusement.

The young mother, obsessed by little Johnnie, fails to see this. She is such a blind devotee of the cradle that she thinks her husband doesn't mind how she looks, or how she neglects him, or how much she leaves him alone, because it is all done for baby. Unfortunately hubby doesn't take this view of the subject. He sees is that his wife has lost her looks, that she is no longer attractive and makes no more effort to please him.

Drives the Couple Apart.

Moreover, it is dull and lonely at home with wife in the nursery, and so he starts out to find amusement on his own book. And he finds it, and thus the child that should have brought the two more closely together becomes the wedge that drives them apart.

No man enjoys having his nose put out of joint, even by his own son, and if the true correspondent, in many a divorce case, were named, it would be shown that he was a small, lobster-colored individual with no teeth, or hair and a countenance with the expression of a cream cheese.

It is an admirable thing, of course, for a woman to be a devoted mother; but maternal affection is a virtue that can be carried too far. Husbands have some rights as well as babies, and the wife who neglects her husband for her children does so at her peril.

Of one thing she may be pretty certain, and that is not many men stay neglected. They find comforters, and while mother is spending the evening holding little Johnnie's hands and hearing his prayers, some other woman is holding father's hand and he isn't saying his prayers.

MAKING ROOM

"Why is she so popular?"

"She takes off her hat in a crowded car."

The De Bercy Affair

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By GORDON HOLMES

FURNEAUX seemed to murmur to him self: "As I hoped!" And now the glitter of malice passed away from his dull eyes, his forehead flushed a little, and went his hand to Osborne's wrist in a flash of misery, without in the least understanding why, mechanically smote it.

"Stupid!" Mr. Osborne said Furneaux; Miss Marsh would consider that a noble deed of you, if she knew it."

"She will never know it."

"Oh, never is a long time. One must be more or less hopeful. Unfortunately, I am compelled to inform you that I am here to arrest you—"

"Me? At last! For the murder?"

"It was to be, Mr. Osborne. But, come you shall first have the joy of telling free Miss Marsh, to whom you have given so much—there's a cab—"

Osborne followed him into the cab with a feeling brain. Yet he said stupidly:

"I hope I shall be hanged," he said, in a sort of self-communing. "That will be better than marriage—better, too than deserving to be hanged, which might have been true of me a few minutes ago.

"Why, I killed a woman in thought just now—killed her, with my hands. Yes, that is better. I should hate to have done that wretched thing, but now I am safe—safe from—myself."

Without a Warrant

As Furneaux and Osborne were being driven rapidly to Poland street, bent on the speedy release of Rosalind, inspector Winter, for his part, was seeking for Furneaux in a fury of haste, eager to arrest his colleague before the latter could arrest Osborne.

At the same time Clarke, determined to bring matters to a climax by arresting Janee, was lurking about a corner of Old Compton street, every moment expecting the passing of his quarry.

Each man was acting without a warrant. The police are empowered to arrest "on suspicion," and each of the three could produce proof to plenty to convict his man.

As for Winter he knew that where Osborne was Furneaux would not be far that day. Hence, when in the forenoon he received notice from one of his watchers that Furneaux had that morning deliberately fled from observation, he bade his man watch Osborne's steps with one eye, while the other searched the offing for the shadow of Furneaux, on the sound principle that "subcessive the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together."

Thus Osborne's ride to Holland Park to see Hyldia Prout had been followed; and, two hours afterwards, while he was still waiting for Hyldia's arrival, Winter's spy from behind the frosted glass of a public house bar had watched Furneaux's arrival and long wait on the pavement.

He promptly telephoned the fact to Winter, and Winter was about to set out downward from Scotland Yard when the detective telephoned afresh to say that Mr. Osborne had appeared out of the house, and had been accosted by Furneaux.

Evidently Furneaux was careless of espionage at that moment. He hailed a cab without so much as a glance at the man, passing close to Osborne and himself on the pavement, and it was easy to overhear the address given to the driver—a house in Poland street.

Why in Poland street Winter could not conceive. At all events the fact that the drive was not to a police-station inspired him with the hope that Osborne's arrest was for some reason not yet as accomplished fact, and he, too, set off for Poland street, which happily lay much nearer Scotland Yard than Holland Park.

The Reason

Meantime, Osborne and Furneaux were hastening eastward in silence. Osborne with his head bent between his clenched hands, and an expression of face as wrenched with pain as that of a man racked with neuralgia.

It was now that he began to feel in reality the tremendousness of the vow he had just made to marry Hyldia Prout, in order to set Rosalind free. Compared to that his impending arrest was too little a thing for him to care about.

But as they were spinning along to Kensington Gardens, a twinge of curiously prompted him to ask why he was to be arrested now, after being assured repeatedly that the police would not formulate any charge against him.

Furneaux, sitting upright in front of him, and when he answered, his voice was metallic.

"There was no escaping it Mr. Osborne," he said. "But be thankful for small mercies. I was waiting there in the street for you, intending to pounce on you at once, but when I knew that you had sacrificed yourself for Miss Marsh, I thought He deserves to be permitted to release her; for, to promise to marry Miss Prout—"

"What are you saying? How could you possibly know that I promised to marry Miss Prout?"

Osborne's brain was still seething, but some glimmer of his wanted clear light here warned him of the exceeding oddity of the detective's remark.

"Well, you told me that you had bought the knowledge of her whereabouts with your youth and your life—so I assumed that there could be no other explanation."

"Still, that is singularly deep guessing."

"Well, it was demand greater accuracy. I foresaw exactly what would be the result of making an offer to your secretary, in case you really did care for Miss Marsh. Therefore, I thought about the interview because—"

"You brought it about?" cried Osborne in a crescendo of astonishment.

"Yes. You see I am crafty. You are aware that I knew where Miss Marsh could be found, and I might have given you the information direct. But I preferred to write a note telling you that you must depend on Miss Prout for tidings."

"All it was you, then, who sent that note! But how could how strangely cruel! And you must have read her letter yourself! Don't you realize that your detestable action has bound me for life to a woman whom—oh, I hope, since you are about to hand me over to the police, you will be good enough to spare me Dead Sea fruit!"

Told to Hope

He covered his eyes but Furneaux, whose face was twitching curiously, laid a hand on his knee, and said in a low voice:

"Do not despair. You are not the only man in the world who suffers. I had reasons—and strong reasons—for acting in this manner. One reason was that I was uncertain of the depth of your affection for Miss Marsh, and I wished to be as certain as you have now made me.

"But how on earth could that concern you? The depth or shallowness of my affection for Miss Marsh?" asked Osborne in a sudden heat of anger and indignation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WRITE AND FIND OUT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am frustrated with grief. The facts are these: I am twenty-one years old and desperately in love with a young woman two years my junior.

I have been going with her for the past three years, and we were to be married in the near future.

Last week, when I called to see her as usual, she gave me the cold shoulder and she acted coldly all evening. I asked her what the matter was, but she refused to tell me.

The other night I called again, as was my custom for she past three years, when her sister met me at the door and told me that the girl was "out at home."

I have written to her, but of no avail. She does not answer my letters.

What shall I do?

THERE must be some reason for her very peculiar behavior. Can you think of nothing that could have changed her so suddenly?

Write to her sister and ask for an explanation of what has happened.

Tell her that you are willing to do anything to reclaim her sister's affection.

It is unjust that she should leave you so completely in the dark as to the cause of her actions.

YOU WERE AT FAULT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I had quite a discussion the other evening with the young gentleman I keep company with, and would appreciate your opinion very much on the following:

One night a short while ago he took me to a dance. While dancing he saw a young lady with whom he formerly kept company. He asked me if I would mind if he danced with her, and I said I would mind decidedly, as I did not think it was right for him to leave me sitting a dance out while he danced with a young woman I had never seen before.

He maintained that he was right and said it was only proper that he should ask her to dance, while I say he was wrong.

He did not dance with her, but the discussion caused quite a little ill-feeling.

Will you kindly let me know which one of us took the right view?

PERPLEXED.

MY dear girl, you were very much at fault. There is certainly no objection to your friend dancing with other girls.

A man can never be ruled by an unreasonable woman, and your behavior made you appear not only unreasonable but also jealous and ill-tempered.

I would advise you to apologize to him and to control your feelings better in the future.

Didn't Appeal to Willie

By KENNETT HARRIS

"IT'S a gay world, isn't it, Willie," said the nice old gentleman to the little boy with a beaming smile. It's full of fine, hearty, friendly and generous people, isn't it, people who would do anything for a fellow—share their last crusts with him. It is good to live in such a world, what?"

"It's all right I guess, agreed the little boy.

"I expected a more enthusiastic response from you, my dear little old gentleman.

"All right hardly seems to do it justice when it's so affectionate and genial. When the world puts its arm around my shoulder and laughs at my jokes and offers me rides in its goat-cart I always feel that it's something more than all right." I say it, you old world, a peachy old world, a jolly place to live in. You really think that, too, don't you?"

"I dunno," answered the little boy.

"You don't know?" expostulated the old gentleman. "You surprise me, Willie. Weren't you unanimously elected captain of the football team this afternoon? Didn't they leave it to you to decide whether Willie Watkins had a right to knock out of trading his rabbit to Hope Wicker?

The little boy looked at his relative with plain astonishment.

"I happened to be passing, explained the nice old gentleman. I guess you didn't notice me. I admire you that I had a perfection of eavesdropping, but when I heard my favorite and only grandson mobbed by his companions in such a dastardly manner, I couldn't help lingering for a moment. Those boys think a great deal of you, Willie. It fills my heart with pride to observe their deference to your opinion and their eagerness to win your approval. Fine, but of little shape. Wasn't Dennie Masters among 'em?"

Generous Danny

"Yes, sir," replied the little boy.

"Think of that!" said the nice old gentleman. "There's many and forgiving spirit for you. After smirking and gone down out of the eye you gave him and the bump still on his forehead where you hit him with the rock you threw, and in a wind of blinding steel with a scowl of hate and a heart full of bitterness, he boasts that you and him is partners. I like a boy like that."

"I—I guess so," The little boy checked himself.

"But what?" asked the nice old gentleman.

"Oh nothin'."

"I hope that you don't mean to cast any doubt on his sincerity said the nice old gentleman. "Anyway, the others are more inspiring, for you haven't blacked one of their eyes that I know of. In fact it seems to me that only a few days ago they were pecking you with clubs and opprobrious epithets. Wasn't that the case that you wanted me to get after?"

"Some of them," admitted the little boy. "But they haven't got it in for me much since I licked 'em."

"I should say not," exclaimed the nice old gentleman. "They would hardly elect you captain of the team and give you triumphal post-card rides if they felt any animosity toward you. I think the traits of the hustler is that they have had some to a realization of their own good qualities. That often happens. Looking back on my own past life, it seems to me I has myself similar changes of heart. I have found myself in an instant on the top wave of popularity. People whom I always had suspected of indifference have showed their contempt and kindred interest to me. My fingers have been crushed with the hearty grips of men I had regarded as my bitterest acquaintance and later on in the proceedings, total strangers have tried to embrace me. You see, Willie, they had suddenly discovered that I was of a rather sterling character. I was a credit to society. By the way, I saw your Uncle George when I was down town this morning. He was sleeping in a doorway. Quite a credit to society, I should think, Willie."

Willie Is Embarrassed

The little boy looked strangely embarrassed.

"What did you do with the dollar he gave you to put in your bank to show interest against your declining years?" demanded the nice old gentleman, sternly.

"I—I spended it," stammered the little boy.

"That's what I thought," said the nice old gentleman.

ASKED $10,000 FOR LORIMER

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Sensational testimony was given before the special Senate committee conducting the second inquiry into the election of Senator Lorimer of Illinois today by Cyrus McCormack of Chicago, president of the International Harvester Company. He declared that Edward Hines contributed to the amount of $10,000 contribution from his company in order to forward retirement of the alleged $100,000 fund used to secure Lorimer's election.

Asked on what oth occasions he had contributed for the same purpose, Mr. McCormack said that Hines had told him that he (Hines) had been approached by Hines on the subject of making a $10,000 contribution to the Republican campaign fund. The institution was in no way found to be responsible for the election of Senator Lorimer declared the witness. Funds, he said, he told Hines that the Harvester Company would not consider the application favorably unless Lorimer was elected.

BROWN HOLDS IVY DAY FETE

PROVIDENCE, June 20.—Today was Ivy Day at Brown University. Two hundred girls of the undergraduate classes of the women's college of the university gave their annual beautiful ivy chain and stood to one side while the forty-three girls of the graduating class marched through Ivy Lane Hall.

Ivy Day exercises always make up an interesting part of commencement week at Brown. The girls undergrads filed out of their dormitories at 10:30 today, forming the long ivy chain which was borne on their shoulders. The graduates, in cap and gown, in double column, in Pembroke Hall they parted, and down the middle swept the seniors to the platform. The line of graduates was headed by the school class president, Miss Ruth Comstock Burroughs of Pawtucket.

The program in Pembroke Hall consisted of addresses by Miss Burroughs, by President William H. P. Faunce, D.D., of Brown University, by Miss Lida Shaw King of the women's college, an address to the undergraduates by Miss Emma Henrietta Hunt, dean of Women, and an address to Prof. Dennis Sumner Miller of the University of South Carolina.

This evening the seniors of the university will give a reception in the gymnasium, and tonight the seniors of the undergraduates will give a reception to the girl

VISITORS THRONG QUINCY STREETS

Today will be a gala one for Quincy in fact, the second one. The big Mercantile Week which opened yesterday has far exceeded the expectations of the local merchants, and with a continuance of good weather will break all records on the South Shore.

Thousands of people are flocking to Quincy today to take advantage of the special bargains offered at the merchants in connection with the big week. The citizens have caught the spirit.

Fully ten thousand people attended the band concert in City square last night. Band concerts will be given every night. New attractions are being added to the program each night. Last night the Quincy quintet, whose members are enrolled at Harvard university, responded to the second annual Merchants' Week.

The big day will be on the coming day, Saturday, when the entire fire department will give an exhibition in accordance with orders from Mayor Shea. There will be four races for hose and hook and ladder companies, throwing streams through the steamer guns on the boats on which the old hotel Granite and Lovell once stood, and which were purchased when Quincy was a town, and the ladder contest for the championship.

The band concert this evening will be held in City square, opposite City Hall.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

TRADING LIGHT ON THE MARKET

NEW YORK, June 20. Quietness of trade marked the opening of the stock market today and the limited offers changes were without much importance. The gains and losses were about evenly divided. Steel opened up by strength there was no the demand. In fact practically all the trading was professional.

Amalgamated copper opened unchanged. Reading was off ½, other minor losses being scored in Atchison, Missouri Pacific and Southern Pacific. Erie again came in for common advancing ½, and the preferred gaining a full point. Canadian Pacific was in sympathy with the bear selling in that stock.

In the latter part of the first quarter of an hour a rescinding tendency developed, stocks that had shown gains yielding and making a uniform but moderate downward movement.

The curb market opened steady with Standard Oil and American Tobacco unchanged. Chief interest on the curb centered in the new Panama bonds. About $400,000 of them were traded in during the first few minutes from 103¼ to 102⅞. Subsequently they advanced to 103¾.

Trading in American on the London exchange was narrow, price changes being few. Canadian Pacific was supported in London but when it appeared here it declined in New York. Owing to the coronation trading is quite light.

5 HURT IN CHICAGO BY FALLING WALLS.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Five men were seriously injured, three perhaps fatally, when a section of the old Continental Hotel building, Madison street and Wabash avenue, which is being demolished, crashed to the street in the height of the noon hour rush. Hundreds of persons narrowly escaped injury from flying debris. The injured were all workmen.

STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

It is an absolute necessity that reactions should come every now and then just as it is to have thunderstorms every now and then to clear the atmosphere. Those who take on stocks now will have no reason to regret it, but they should see that their commitments are well protected. This, however, is advisable at all times.

$ $ $

It is the report to the Street that the conservative element expresses the hope that there will be a reaction of 10 points in the market as it would improve the whole situation materially. Further more, it would be apt to bring about the purchase of stocks by careful speculators who refused to enter into bullish commitments when the average was around the highest of the year.

$ $ $

Lack of interest by those responsible for the market is evidenced by the fact they have decided to await crop developments before they move ahead with the advance. They hope they are also waiting for the end of the holidays and Independence Day vacation has eliminated that market as an influence on American securities.

$ $ $

Orders for steel continue to increase. The Steel Trust is now getting new business at the rate of 30,000 tons a day, as compared with 24,000 in May. Manufacturers generally believe the big buying movement by the railroads will begin in July, because of them are holding back their orders until the end of the fiscal year, June 30. Orders placed in July will not appear in statements of earnings for this year, which they wish to make as favorable as possible.

$ $ $

That the independent steel companies are receiving their share of the new business are attracting attention to the low prices at which the stocks of some of the largest of these concerns are selling. This is particularly true of Republic Steel common. Out of the purchases of that stock were by persons who intend to keep the certificates for a long pull. The cash company could pay dividends on its preferred, but behind it there is a surplus sufficient to back into the property. This points has made the common stock look especially attractive.

$ $ $

The opinion is expressed in many quarters that the remarkably successful distribution of the $30,000,000 offering of Panama 2s, through a heavy over-subscription, will stimulate interest in general bond market and that the demand for all kinds of safe and high-interest-bearing bonds and notes will be more active. Many small investors had made comparatively large profits on the rise in bonds and been unable to re-enter the investment securities market on account of the advance. These timid bids had been successful. Those who have funds to invest now are in a position to invest their surplus funds in other securities on a similar scale and will hasten to do so. Speculative interests are more than likely to withdraw from the investment securities market will have a tendency to stimulate the speculative and conservative interests still desire further advances. On the other hand, there is little inducement to seek gold abroad because of the superabundance of money here. Also while the ability of this market to draw gold from abroad is being fortified and an advance in interest rates here from whatever cause it might come will be pretty sure to check gold import movement.

$ $ $

A fair demand prevails for copper metal at 12⅝ cents. Copper men believe the Producers' Association statement for June will show a shrinkage of about 15,000,000 pounds in the surplus stock.

$ $ $

The Amalgamated Nevada Mines Company has levied an assessment of 75c a share per share, payable in installments to October 1.

LIFE-SAVING BOARD TESTING DEVICES

Professor O. H. Pittman, superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, presided today at the annual meeting of the board of life saving appliances, which opened its week's session in the Federal building. The board is considering many new improved life-saving appliances from all over the country, to be tested in many of Public Affection to test some of the devices.

LIEGE, Belgium, June 20.—A rain storm today caused a postponement of the start in the second leg of the circuit of Europe air race from this city to Utrecht, Holland. The eighteen contestants here were compelled to await fairer weather.

F. GRAY COMPANY TO OPEN BIG REDUCTION SALE.

The F. Gray Company will open a record-breaking, price-slashing sale at its store on Washington and Hanover streets Thursday morning at 8:30.

It has suddenly become necessary to make room for the incoming supply of Publo overcoats.

Although many suits are going at prices far below cost, the wage-earners of Boston will profit, for they can buy three suits now almost for the regular price of one.

The Oswego blue serge suits, popular alike with business men for daily wear and week-ends (or holidays) wear, will go at reductions in price of from one-half to one-third.

Prices on children's goods are cut way down. A large line of confirmation suits will need to be disposed of quickly to make room for the Publo.

Since it usually happens that when a man buys clothing he wants a complete wearing outfit, a special sale of hats, straw and Panama, has been arranged. The prices on them will be cut, not so much because they take up room as because the price-slashing carnival is general throughout the store.

Exactly 1,000 white washable vests will be sold at about one-fourth usual prices, and to complete the extent of the reduction another bargain that will be perhaps more popular still is a great slaughtering of prices in the trousers department. Exactly 10,000 pairs of trousers will share in the price reduction. They will be spread out on counters, and the purchasers in the early days of the sale will have a large stock from which to select

AUTOISTS PLAN MOONLIGHT RUN

By J. C. KERRISON.

So eminently successful was the Spring outing of the Bay State Automobile Association to Falmouth Saturday and Sunday last that it has virtually been determined to hold a moonlight run in the very near future. President Gilmore and Chairman Stevens are figuring on the best time and place for such an outing and there is no question but what the announcement of the date will be received with delight and pleasure not only by those who participated in the outing of last week, but likewise by a good many of the stay-at-homes.

Savannah is nothing if not enterprising. Now that word has been received that Savannah and Grand Prize races, she has made a proposal more or less formal to the control board of the A. A. A. to run the Glidden tour from New York to Savannah. Such a run will be November 24th.

It is hardly probable that the invitation of Savannah will be accepted, as there really seems to be an antipathy on the part of the touring committee to take the run, if it is held, to Canada the Fall.

* * *

It is predicted that the trend in commercial vehicles will be toward short runabout as it has been with touring automobiles. At first when the big machines were turned out, there wasn't much attention paid to that. What men wanted was a car that would do the work, and as it was being used, as a rule, for heavy hauling, the noise it made didn't seem to count for much.

* * *

Considering his new motorcycle more important than his wife and child, and refusing to support them until the vehicle was paid for, Augustus Robinson, who works on a farm near Moorestown, N. J., was arrested on a charge of desertion. Mrs. Robinson said she only wanted $5 a week for the support of their child, and expressed a willingness to work for her living until the motorcycle is paid for.

Among the several means that can be readily employed for testing the alignment of wheels, a new one has just developed. This is to jack up the wheels and, having set the tires to spin them, causing the water to be thrown off. The water thus thrown off will leave a wet streak on the floor. The wheels should be exactly parallel with the plane of the wheel. Drawing a line with the front wheels on each side of the car provides a ready means for checking up the alignment. This can, of course, be done by means of a cord. The use of this method is unattended by the usual complications introduced by the feelers and running boards to methods of direct measurement.

* * *

The best safeguard against side-slipping is to travel slowly at a steadily uniform rate. The next most efficient application of the brakes, a sharp turn of the steering wheel and a sudden application of pace may set up slipping. The driver should, therefore, try to run his engine at an almost steadily speed, and should avoid travelling at a pace which would necessitate a sudden application of the brakes should an obstruction suddenly block the road. In the event of a skid, if one has had, he should regulate his speed so that the running gear of the machine will follow the car sufficiently to provide for the necessary steadiness of traffic.

WEALTHY WAITER IS HOST TO PATRONS.

CHICAGO, June 20.—John Rehm, a waiter at the Bismarck Hotel, after treating a three-year wish during which he accumulated a fortune, has quit to take his family to Germany. He played host to his customers and fellow waiters, furnishing wine and cigars free to them all on his last night. It cost him $125.

HISTORIAN IS CALLED 'FRAUD'

In a decision handed down today the full bench of the Supreme Court finds that James H. Stark, the Winchester historian who ripped the colonists of Massachusetts up the back by calling some of them liars, thieves, frauds, embezzlers and other pleasant names of that sort, himself used fraud in procuring a title to the land adjoining the Savin Hill Yacht Club, owned by Mrs. Agnes F. Richards.

As a result of the transaction the executive committee of the Savin Hill Yacht Club, of which Stark was the first commodore, has declared his membership forfeited.

Judge Morton in the opinion handed down today says: "The matter before the court in the case in question from Mrs. Richards, to one Robinson, the Savin Hill Yacht Club had acquired land adjoining that of Mrs. Richards, and the result of the answers of the jury and of the facts found by the Land Court at the previous hearing is that Stark falsely represented to her that he was interested in the matter solely for that club, and was acting for it in asking her to release to him the land, and that she relied upon such representations in making the deed, whereas in truth and in fact he was acting for himself and the petitioner Robinson.

This of itself constituted actual fraud upon her as to entitle her to void the deed."

After Stark obtained a title to the land in question he had it registered in the Land Court, but later the heirs of Mrs. Richards, who had died in the meantime, had the case reopened on the ground of fraud on the part of Stark.

Judge Dana thereupon sent the case to the Superior Court to determine the issues of fact and in answer to questions the jury found that Stark procured to title from Mrs. Richards by representing to her that the land was desired by the Savin Hill Yacht Club. Judge Davis then reversed his former decision, ordered the register to issue the title, whereupon Robinson and Stark took exceptions to the final decree.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 150,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

SPECIAL ELECTION ON MELROSE BONDS

Melrose will hold a special election to pass upon a proposed bond issue of $45,000 for the erection of a Memorial hall and city auditorium on land in Main street opposite the High school. The call is signed by 105 citizens asking for a referendum vote on the question caused the city government to order a special election held Saturday, July 1. The proposed building and land will cost $84,000, of which $45,000 was appropriated and the rest, $17,500 was given by ex-Alderman John C. F. Blaisdell, the Boston contractor. $10,000 was raised in a private campaign in five days, and a fund of $11,500 was already on hand for the work, completing the $84,000 fund.

Reciprocity, and Certain Thought By-Products

You have heard of by-products. They are those side-issue products incidental to and growing out of any main proposition in production. Some gory-minded Armour or Cudahy or Morris slaughters in the name of beef a cow. Beef is the main proposition. Under the term by-product, however, he hands you a camel's-hair brush weeded from the cow's tail, or a tortoise shell comb carved from the cow's horn, or a bottle of glue melted from the cow's hoof.

Just as there are by-products in the beef producing business, so, too, there are by-products in the thought producing business. You set your thought machinery in motion over Reciprocity, for example, and at once a score or so of side-issue thoughts are ground forth as by-products. One of the latter refers imperatively to the farms.

Were the AMERICAN to give counsel to the young man of this country, its first and most emphatic advice would be to set up as a farmer. To the young man of the farm it would say "STAY THERE!" To the city young man, within a week's travel of a farm, it would say "GO THERE!" In poking about among what figures should shed a ray of light upon Reciprocity, and show what whys and wherefores favor its adoption, divers interesting, not to say instructive, discoveries are made. One and all they support that counsel of BACK TO THE FARM!

Those men get the most for their effort who labor in trades which present the least competition. And of all who, toiling with their hands, are found eating their bread in the sweat of their brow, the press and crowd of competition fall most lightly upon the farmer. He who would earn his living as a railroader or a carpenter or a hand—skilled or unskilled—in a factory, will find himself more bid against and competed with than is any farmer between the coast lines of the continent.

The reason?

While an ever increasing throng of men stand bidding for employment on a railroad or in a factory or as a carpenter—and, as incident to that bidding, lowering the wage paid by that factory or railroad or employer of carpenters—men by tens and hundreds and thousands are leaving the farms. The ranks of the food consumers are being increased. The ranks of the farmers, the food producers, are being decreased. The consequence? THE FARMER GETS MORE FOR WHAT HE PRODUCES. His income mounts; his wages, so to speak, go climbing.

The opposite is true of the carpenter, the railroader, the factory hand. He is lucky if, with the aid of his labor unions, he can hold his wages, his income, at present levels. At the same time the cost of his living is going up, and he pays more and still more for what he puts into his stomach. To be sure, the huge fraction of any recent increase in the price of living is the merest measure of the blood-sucking of certain trusts. A splendid splinter of it, however, goes to the farmers in advanced prices for wheat and corn and potatoes, born of diminished competition.

Consider New England. Take the twenty years from 1880 to 1900. In that narrow span of twenty years, 15,344 New England farms went out of existence. What fields of wheat had waved there, what corn had tasselled there, what worlds of potatoes had been nourished there, were blotted out. These farms? Cut into building lots to receive the swell of population in the towns; sold to gold-wallowing manufacturers, made Monte Cristos through "protection," to be turned into unproductive parks or playgrounds for weekenders and others among the lolling rich. In some instances, the farmer—lured to the city like a moth to a candle—had abandoned the farm. Its neglected acres lay untilled and fallow, waiting for some club or some purchasing Croesus to restore it to the wilderness in the name of a game preserve or a hunting lodge.

In those twenty years which witnessed the death of those 15,344 farms and during which 17,000 farmers—taking their families along—deserted New England agriculture, the over-all population of New England increased one million and a half. Seventeen thousand farmers wiped out; 5,000,000 acres of farm land wiped out; 1,500,000 increase in population from 1880 to 1910—that was the New England story! ONE MILLION FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND MORE MOUTHS TO FEED, SEVENTEEN THOUSAND FEWER FARMERS TO FEED THEM!

Those 17,000 farmers? Most of them went into the towns—into the factories, to remember and regret too late their deserted meadows, perhaps. Those 1,500,000—most of them from Europe—added to the population went into the factories, too. During those twenty years, while 17,000 farmers, with their 5,000,000 acres, so far as agriculture was concerned, were disappearing, New England spent an even $1,000,000,000, and as a result 25,360 new factories pointed their sooty fingers toward the sky.

This shift from farm to factory still continues. The incomplete returns from four of the five New England States announce that during the last ten years—from 1900 to 1910—the farm average in those four States has decreased by 734,000 acres, and 1,602 farms have passed away. During those ten years, too, the count of population has clambered by roundly 1,000,000.

With variations, and to a less degree, the story of New England is being repeated, North and South, East and West, throughout the land. The farmer, comparatively, is growing less. There are more of him, numerically, than there were a year ago, or ten years ago, or twenty years ago. But not when compared with the railroader, the carpenter, the factory hand. Folk are leaving the farms to live in the towns.

The golden rule in money-making is to always go against the herd—against the stream. BUY WHEN THE WORLD SELLS, SELL WHEN THE WORLD BUYS! That is the law in Wall Street, as any stock shark will tell you. That same law fits profitably into every fence corner of existence. The time to become a farmer is when others, facing cityward, are turning their foolish backs on the plow.

Some folk in advance of this counsel would seem to have become awake to the situation. In 1900 the average value of the American farm was $15.69 an acre. The Census for 1910—now with the printer—will fix the average value of the American farm at $22 an acre. Farms are again coming into the market. The farm which was worth $2,000 in 1900 is worth $4,000 now. For forty years the tide has been setting toward the city. It has reached its flood and has turned again toward the farm. Hereafter the farm buyer will outnumber the farm seller.

Help Innocent Wife and Baby for Whom Husband Turned Thief

The remarkable confession of Robert A. Saunders, written with graphic detail by himself and sent to the Sunday AMERICAN, in which he tells of the unhappy conditions that led him to commit a crime, presents a sociological problem which seriously confronts the public.

Saunders—if his amazing story is true, and nearly all of it has been verified—did everything that a man could to earn an honest living for his young wife. He worked all day Saturdays and on holidays to get money ahead to provide for the little baby that was expected. His wife went to the hospital and he lost his position.

He did not tell his wife that he had been thrown out of work, but said that he was going to look for a better position. He left his wife with her tiny baby at her breast and went forth—to ROB. Civilization had faded from the man in a moment when he looked upon his dear ones in want!

And like many another man he never thought of DISCOVERY and the LAW.

His wife suffers infinitely more now, even if provided with every comfort, than she would if he were free to come to her AN INNOCENT MAN with only a crust of bread.

Kind hearted people have already offered help to the young wife and mother. It is right that they should. Any help that may be offered through the AMERICAN will be sent to this unfortunate woman.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

THE SOCIAL UNREST ALL OVER THE WORLD

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

CAPITAL and labor are co-operant; competitively and jealously so, but nevertheless, co-operant; and the paramount problem, partly economic and partly moral, is how such a division of the products of co-operation can be made as will avoid revolution and leave unshaken the existing foundations of government.

We are facing dire possibilities. Our peril is certainly greater than is sometimes realized. We have learned to believe so thoroughly in things as they are that it is difficult to conceive of their being replaced by something that is different.

We hear the rumbling of the thunder, but it is so distant that we have little expectation that it will rain where we are, although when we take time to listen we observe that the peals are becoming heavier and heavier.

Not only is the economic unrest on the increase in our own country, but the same is true in other countries, and local dissatisfaction existing elsewhere and everywhere.

The universality of it is to be recognized as a guarantee of its reasonableness. Some who approach the situation are soliacing themselves by the reflection that things in times past have always worked themselves out and that they can therefore be depended upon to do the same thing now.

It is true that they have always worked themselves out, but in many cases most disastrously. The track of history is paved with institutions and governments that were built upon firm foundations, but they were shattered by the development of events.

The Folly of Leaving It All To a Special Providence.

The doctrine that we are under the care of some special Divine Providence who will see us through in spite of everything has not much to be said in its favor, either logically or religiously.

Others with an even more careless and wretched abandonment are saying, "After us the deluge," reconciled to have the country and its institutions go to the dogs if only disaster can be deferred till the next generation. Which leads one to say that the finest type of patriotism is that which has a heart for the country's future quite as much as for its present, and which aims so to safeguard and strengthen its institutions as to secure their stability.

In the present crisis, therefore, the most pertinent question that can be asked is, What is there being done that will tend to allay existing discontent by removing the GROUNDS of discontent?

It certainly is not going to be accomplished by any process of charitable benefaction. Charity foments disquiet, not allays it, for such conferment is the making over to a poor man what he feels already belongs to him by right. It humiliates, and what humiliates maddens. Hence the frequent cry: "Don't give me money, give me work."

No permanent results in this respect are achieved by the endowment of eleemosynary institutions, such as infirmaries and hospitals. However much needed relief they may bring to sufferers they do not relieve the sore spot in the body politic, for the funds which compose the endowment are considered to be in part, at least, the rightful possession of the very persons upon whom it is bestowed under the aspect of charity.

And the bitterness so engendered is still further intensified by the fact that such benefactions are interpreted by the beneficiaries—and not always unjustly—as purchase money laid down on earthly ground in advance payment for benefits to be enjoyed in regions celestial.

Why Do Not the Immensely Wealthy Foresee the Storm?

It is strange that wealthy donors do not appreciate this. And it is furthermore strange that those who are possessed of the large fortunes which are the provoking cause of so much unrest and a constant menace to our peace and stability are not alert to devise means for averting the storm that assuredly impends, and that will sooner or later break over our heads unless the burden resting upon the shoulders of the less favored is very materially lightened and grounds given them for feeling that their rights are going to be fairly interpreted and justly conceded.

The selfishness of human nature is such, however, that very little can be expected from individual initiative, and it is to the general government that we must have to look for corrective action. Something was done by Mr. Roosevelt's administration, and what he accomplished was gained in spite of capital, not by its aid.

Government can furthermore take action in the two following particulars, each of which will be in the nature of relief and exempt from any suspicion of charity.

The first is the immediate and substantial reduction, if not entire removal, of all imposts on articles essential to the life and well-being of the ultimate consumer.

The loss to the national revenues so resulting may do much good by revising upward the tariff on luxuries, or, better still, by the practice of a reasonable economy at Washington—a virtue of which national legislation seems utterly innocent.

The second is the adoption of the personal income-tax, as called for by the proposed constitutional amendment.

As compared with the rich man the poor man has very few privileges, and it is a simple matter of justice that we should each of us put into the public treasury an amount proportioned to what we receive in the shape of the public's beneficiaries.

It is generally conceded that wealth does not carry its fair share of the public burden, and any disposition to oppose the personal income tax bill as bearing heavily on capital is a confession of willingness to shirk one of wealth's privileges and responsibilities.

The situation is a menacing one and requires to be faced, and the capitalists are the ones to face it; and because they have more money than the rest, it is upon them that the blow will fall more heavily if existing discontent is allowed to go on growing till it ripens into revolution.
